House Approves Ban On Late Abortions

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa House has approved a ban on abortions after the 20th week of pregnancy, but the bill has no future as it will fail to meet an April 1 legislative deadline.

The House voted 59-39 Thursday evening to approve the measure. But the bill can't be considered for the rest of the session under legislative rules because it hasn't cleared a Senate committee.

Iowa abortion opponents pushed for new abortion restrictions this session in part because the state now has a Republican governor who is likely to sign them.

After lawmakers in Nebraska enacted similar restrictions, a doctor in the Omaha area announced plans to offer late-term abortions at a clinic just across the border in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Neb. Patrol Seizes Marijuana, Arrests 4

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Nebraska State Patrol says troopers seized 75 pounds of marijuana following an Interstate 80 traffic stop and arrested four people from California.

A patrol news release Thursday says a trooper stopped a car Wednesday in Lincoln on suspicion of following too closely. The trooper then learned of a second car traveling with the one he stopped.

About 15 minutes later, another trooper stopped the second car on I-80 near Gretna on suspicion of failing to signal.

The patrol says a search of the second car turned up more than 75 pounds of marijuana.

The driver and passenger of that car were arrested on suspicion of possession of marijuana with intent to deliver. The driver and passenger of the first car were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to deliver marijuana.

Man Charged In Fight Victim's Death

WATERTOWN (AP) — Police say a man involved in a Watertown fight earlier this month has died.

Watertown Police say 26-year-old Justin Jatton died at a Sioux Falls hospital Thursday.

KELO-TV reports that Jatton was injured in a parking lot fight on March 13.

Authorities say 28-year-old Jerrin Stulken was charged with aggravated assault following the fight but faces murder charges.

Corn Acres Expected To Be 2nd Largest

SIOUX FALLS (AP) — South Dakota farmers expect to plant their second-largest corn crop in history this year.

The Agriculture Department on Thursday released spring planting estimates that peg South Dakota's corn crop at 5.4 million acres, up 850,000 acres from last year and the largest crop since 5.5 million acres in 1931.

Neb. Residents File Claim Over Investment Loss

BY TIMBERLY ROSS
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — More than a dozen Nebraska residents filed an arbitration claim Thursday against a Florida-based investment broker in hopes of recovering money lost to a defunct Grand Island insurance agency.

John Chapman, an attorney for the 15 residents of Grand Island and Omaha who invested a total of $1.7 million, said the filing alleges that Transamerica Financial Advisors sold fraudulent First Americans Insurance Service securities to the public. Three principals of First Americans are awaiting trial on federal charges that they defrauded more than 250 investors out of $29 million.

"Transamerica must have been asleep at the wheel while its representatives were selling this junk," Chapman said.

A representative for Transamerica, which is based in St. Petersburg, Fla., didn't immediately respond to a message left Thursday.

The residents filed their claim with the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, the securities industry's self-policing organization. Chapman declined to provide a copy of the filing, saying FINRA claims are confidential. He said the filing alleges Transamerica representatives offered First Americans promissory notes — which typically promised investment returns of 14 percent to 18 percent — to their clients in exchange for sales commissions.

Court Upholds S.D. Taxidermy Law

CHET BROKAW
Associated Press

PIERRE — A state law allowing game wardens to inspect records kept by taxidermists is constitutional, a split South Dakota Supreme Court said Thursday in a ruling that upheld a taxidermist's conviction for refusing to let an officer see his records.

William Klager Jr., who operates a business called the Taxidermy Man near Stratford, had argued the law allowing officers to inspect taxidermists' records without search warrants violates the constitutional ban against unreasonable searches and seizures.

In the 3-2 decision, the court majority said South Dakota's inspection system meets constitutional standards for inspecting closely regulated businesses. The laws and regulations give business owners sufficient warning about how and when such inspections will be conducted, the justices said.

The two dissenting justices said they would overturn Klager's conviction because taxidermy is not a pervasively regulated business and the laws and regulations do not give businesses enough protections.

Klager said Thursday he could not comment on the high court's ruling because he had not yet seen it.

Klager refused to let a game warden inspect his records in March 2009. He was later convicted of a misdemeanor and assessed fines and costs of $205, according to court records.

South Dakota law requires taxidermists to buy annual licenses and keep written records of all birds, animals and fish they receive and the names of each specimen's owner. The law also provides that officials of the state Game, Fish and Parks Department can inspect those records and specimens during regular business hours.

Klager's appeal said he had not been inspected in the eight years prior to the game warden's request to see his records in 2009. State officials testified that game wardens inspect about half of South Dakota's 200 licensed taxidermists each year.

The appeal argued state laws and regulations are flawed because they give game wardens too much discretion in deciding whether to conduct inspections and fail to give taxidermists certainty that they will ever be inspected.

The Supreme Court's majority opinion said Klager's conviction must be upheld first of all because he gave written consent to have his records inspected when he applied for his taxidermy license.

The state's inspection system also meets standards set in U.S. Supreme Court rulings, the court majority said. Taxidermy is a closely regulated business, inspections are necessary to prevent the illegal taking of wildlife, and the regulations give business owners sufficient notice to justify inspections without warrants, the justices said.

"In sum, Klager had no actual subjective expectation of privacy regarding the records he was required to produce as a condition of his licensure," Justice Steven Zinter wrote for the court majority.

Healthy Food Bill Advances

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska lawmakers have advanced a bill that would offer competitive state financing to grocery stores, farmers markets and community gardens that offer nutritious food in low-income areas.

Omaha Sen. Brenda Council said Thursday that her legislation (LB200) would extend more healthy eating options to urban and rural regions that lack access. Opponents argued that market forces would create such options if a demand existed, and questioned whether the program would work.

The bill would direct $150,000 annually to a state fund for healthy food initiatives. It also would cap the maximum available tax credits per year at $200,000. The money could be used to build or expand grocery stores, farmers markets or other venues in so-called "food deserts."
