Not Singing A Happy Tune: White Sox's Tweeting Guillen Suspended 2 Games

CHICAGO (AP) — White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen won't fight his two-game suspension from Major League Baseball for posting messages on his Twitter account after being ejected from a game earlier this week.

"They told me why they're going to do it and they talked to me about taking responsibility," Guillen said prior to Friday's games with the Orioles. "(Serving the suspension) is something I should be doing. I shouldn't be (tweeting) during the game."

Guillen was suspended for games on Friday and Saturday and fined an undisclosed amount for on-field actions in the first inning of Wednesday's game against the Yankees and for comments made via Twitter following his ejection.
