tic supply," he said.

Thune noted oil production from federal lands fell 14 percent between 2010 and 2011, and 96 percent of the increase in domestic production since 2007 has come from non-federal sources.

Archambeau questioned why North Dakota oil fields aren't used to meet domestic needs rather than rely on a 1,200-mile pipeline from Canada.

Thune pointed to the need for constructing new refinery capacity in processing domestic supplies.

"We are seeing the issues that Hyperion has with permitting," he said, referring to the proposed Union County site. "We haven't had a new refinery in the U.S. since 1976."

Thune also spoke of Obama administration and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) proposals that he believes will harm domestic energy production.

The result would be particularly harmful for rural areas such as South Dakota that rely on energy for agriculture, transportation, tourism and other needs, he said.

"Most of our economy is built around fuel," he said. "A lot of these proposals would make it more difficult and expensive."

Thune also spoke about the fiscal conditions affecting the November election.

"Europe is headed for a train wreck. It's on the verge of bankruptcy, and the U.S. isn't far behind," he said. "Admiral Mike Mullen, the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the biggest threat to national security is the national debt. That's a pretty powerful statement, but half of our debt is financed by foreign countries, and China has the largest share."

The federal budget now stands at $3.6 trillion annually, Thune said.

"At the federal level, we have parts of budget spending that are on auto pilot," he said, noting 56 percent of the budget goes for mandatory spending such as Medicare, Medicaid and food stamps.

"When you add interest payments on the national debt, that accounts for 62 percent of the federal budget on its own, and it keeps growing at a dramatic level," he said.

Of the remainder of the federal budget, 20 percent goes for defense discretionary spending and the final 18 percent goes for non-defense discretionary spending, such as the National Park Service, roads and education, Thune said.

"The deficit last year was $1.3 trillion. Forty cents of every $1 that the government spends is borrowed money. We're headed for a train wreck," the senator said.

"And yet we create new government programs. What concerns me, the new health care bill will drive up dramatically our government spending. The early estimates are far under what it is going to be. Medicare and Medicaid are growing at two to three times the rate of inflation."

Americans have suffered during the current recession as their expenses have risen while their assets, such as their homes, have dropped in value, Thune said.

"There is the economic frustration, why we want our elected leaders to do something to the economy," he said. "The best way to address the issue is to expand the economy."

The current economic and political situation has become so unpopular that Congress has plummeted to a 90 percent disapproval rating, Thune said.

"The only people who want to be seen with a member of Congress are paid staff and blood relatives," he added.

"We have some stability there with all the projects going on," she said.

Akland said there have not been a lot of hot topics before the City Commission in contrast to the funding issues faced by the school district.

"The biggest thing has been the purchase of the property out at HSC, and I think most everybody is in favor of the city purchasing that," she stated. "We'll move forward with it."

Highlights for Children magazine has purchased its 73rd feature written by Marilyn Kratz, Yankton. The April 1987 issue contains two charming children's stories written by the Lincoln Elementary School teacher.

The National Guard Armory will be used beginning Monday to handle the expected crush of people filing for unemployment benefits following Friday's closing of the Swift Independent packing plant. The plant provided 340 jobs. Company officials announced six months ago that the plant would close because it was not making a profit.

his new position June 18.

Russell stated that he still has mixed emotions about leaving Yankton for a new community.

"(My family and I have) enjoyed Yankton so much, and it has so many positives going for it," he said, referencing his wife, Lara, and two children, Brietta and Rylan.

Russell is a graduate of Montana State University and said he also has family ties in the Kalispell area.

During his time in Yankton, the city completed an agreement for Menards to build a store, established contracts with a newly-formed employee union and witnessed the opening of the Meridian Bridge to pedestrian traffic.

Still, Russell said he would leave it up to the community to decide if he is leaving Yankton better than he found it after a four-year tenure.

"All I know is that we've worked on some pretty good projects, and I think we've been able to take advantage of some opportunities," he stated. "The community will continue to do that."

Russell said he worked with Kalispell to delay his start date until June so he would have time to ensure a smooth transition for all the ongoing projects in the city, including the Menards development and the purchase of Human Services Center property.

"I just wanted to have a little more time to continue working on them," he stated.

Mayor David Knoff said Russell's departure will be a loss to the city.

"He takes care of business," he stated. "For example, when there are complaints and we direct them to him, they get resolved. He has this ability to handle an irate person and explain the situation. He does a good job at that."

Knoff anticipates the City Commission will hold a special meeting in the coming weeks to discuss how to proceed with the search for a new manager.

Kalispell Mayor Tammi Fisher could not be reached for comment by press time.
