'Beat The Bully' Is Entertaining

"How to Beat the Bully Without Really Trying," by Scott Starkey, Simon & Schuster, 2012. 272 pages. (for ages 8 and up)

BY PAT HANSEN

It's tough leaving your old school behind and starting all over at a new school. It's even tougher when you're a big wimp — we're talking really chicken here, someone who would much rather run than face any difficult situation. To top it off, he's got a smart-aleck mouth with a mind of its own. If being a scaredy-cat doesn't bring him trouble enough, his mouth seems to irritate the school bullies even more.

So Rodney feels like he's going to throw up as he starts at his new school in Ohio. He knows it's just a matter of time until his school life becomes miserable. Sure enough, right away on the bus, Josh, the school bully, singles out Rodney as a new kid. Somehow Rodney's mouth convinces Josh that he's not new; he's been around there for years. Whew! One bus ride survived.

He's not quite so lucky at school. Toby, Josh's best friend, fingers Rodney as a new kid. And Rodney starts off on the wrong foot with his teacher, Mrs. Lutzkraut. Recess comes too soon, and Josh and Toby corner Rodney to take care of him. As Rodney waits for Josh to pound his face in, the other kids are distracted by navy jets flying overhead. No one but Rodney sees the baseball that flies over the fence and right into Josh's nose. Everyone thinks scrawny Rodney has decked beefy Josh. Rodney is a hero!

Rodney finds out being a hero isn't so great, though, when they play a game of football after school, right next door to the nasty McThugg brothers. When Toby asks to join in, then innocently suggests they move the game closer to the McThugg's fence to avoid some rocks, Rodney fails to see the danger. Until Toby throws the ball over the fence into the McThugg's yard. Rodney, the hero, is elected to climb the wooden fence and retrieve the ball. Rodney's about to be exposed for the coward he is, in front of pretty Jessica who's watching the game.

Rodney sneaks in, hoping the McThuggs won't notice him. No such luck. As they take off after Rodney, he slams a rusty gate shut which breaks loose a huge wasp nest. The angry wasps attack the McThugg brothers, who run screaming down the street. Of course, the other kids couldn't see any of this. All they know is that the McThugg brothers are running away crying. Rodney is a hero once again.

Time and time again, Rodney is thrust into tough situations. And time and time again, luck and a little quick thinking on Rodney's part combine to make him look like a knight. But Josh and Toby don't give up easily and Mrs. Lutzkraut has it in for Rodney too. Rodney knows it's just a matter of time before someone exposes him for the fraud that he is.

All of Rodney's luck throughout the book is a bit unbelievable, but it's entertaining anyway. And to see Rodney grow into the person he's pretending to be is heartening. No matter what your age, pick up this book and root for a hero.

USD Opera Bridges Departments, Merges Talent For 'Dido & Aeneas'

VERMILLION — The University of South Dakota Opera will present a modern adaptation of the operatic masterpiece "Dido and Aeneas" at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 28 at Aalfs Auditorium inside Slagle Hall.

"Dido and Aeneas," presented by the USD Opera in conjunction with the USD Theatre, USD Chamber Singers and USD Chamber Orchestra, features a mythic queen, her lover and an evil Sorceress bent on revenge.

"This opera is our largest-scale production to date," noted USD Opera Director Tracelyn Gesteland, D.M.A., assistant professor of music-voice/opera. "Modern audiences will enjoy our updated adaptation of Henry Purcell's classic dramatic masterpiece. This production relays the story of the opera not only with beautiful singing, but also through the use of ballet and modern dance to enhance the narrative."

The plot begins as young Queen Dido of Carthage, played by Natalie Campbell of Sioux Falls mourns her late husband and is pursued by the Trojan Prince, Aeneas, played by Cody Perk of Yankton. In wooing Dido, Aeneas spurns the affections of the Sorceress, played by Laura Kuschel of St. Paul, Minn., resulting in dire consequences.

With choreography by sophomore music major Rebecca Hebda of Yankton, the opera also features Marissa Morris from Rapid City as Ballet Dido, Kenneth Granle from Mantorville, Minn., as Ballet Aeneas, and Chaya Gordon-Bland, assistant professor of theatre, in the role of Ballet Sorceress.

In addition to combining the forces of voice and dance, USD Opera is blazing forward in new partnerships with the USD Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Marie-Elaine Gagnon, D.M.A., and Eunho Kim, D.M.A., both assistant professors of music at USD, as well as the USD Chamber Singers, directed by David Holdhusen, Ph.D., assistant professor of music. In addition to preparing the Chamber Singers to serve as the opera chorus, Holdhusen will also conduct the orchestra for this performance. The production will also feature scenic elements created by the USD Theatre Department.

"The collaboration between USD Opera, the Chamber Singers and the Chamber Orchestra is an excellent opportunity to provide useful and invaluable experience to the student musicians within each ensemble," added Gesteland.

General admission tickets for "Dido & Aeneas" will be sold at the door. The hour-long opera is performed in English and includes supertitles for ease-of-understanding. The production also contains mature themes that are not intended for children.

For more information, contact the USD Department of Music at (605) 677-5274, email music@usd.edu or visit the department's website at www.usd.edu/music.
