S.D. Leaders To Discuss Federal Farm Bill At Forum

SIoux FALLS — South Dakota's conservation and agricultural leaders will join together here on May 2 to discuss how the 2012 U.S. Farm Bill can better conserve the state's land, water and rural communities.

Sponsored by the Izaak Walton League of America, the May 2 forum is scheduled from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. at the Sioux Falls Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, located at 5000 North Oakview Place, Sioux Falls.

Addressing the group in the morning will be South Dakota Secretary of Agriculture Walt Bones and representatives from the South Dakota Congressional Delegation.

The afternoon will feature a panel discussion by South Dakota farmers and comments by representatives of the South Dakota Corn Growers Association, South Dakota Farm Bureau, South Dakota Farmers Union, South Dakota Grasslands Coalition, and Dakota Rural Action.

"Every five years, a massive piece of legislation called the Farm Bill determines how tens of billions of federal tax dollars will be spent to shape American agriculture. These sessions will help all South Dakotans — from farmers to grocery shoppers — better understand how the Farm Bill impacts our food, soil, air and water and how we can better shape sustainable food and farm priorities," said Brad Redlin, agricultural program director of the Izaak Walton League of America.

The Izaak Walton League is working with farmers and conservationists across the Midwest to discuss the needs and opportunities for the 2012 Farm Bill. The goal is to gain public input from all types of citizens on the effective role of the Farm Bill in supporting an agricultural system that achieves stewardship, prosperity, and fairness.

"That means federal farm policies should support agricultural practices that are good for farmers, good for the environment, and good for America," said Brad Redlin, agricultural program director of the Izaak Walton League of America (IWLA).

The U.S. Farm Bill sets federal policy for agriculture, energy, conservation, nutrition, and rural development. The last bill, passed in 2008, was called the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 and carried a price tag of $288 billion. Under current requirements for federal deficit reduction, funding for the Farm Bill will be under increased scrutiny, which underscores the importance of public involvement, Redlin explained.

One way the IWLA is exploring to increase conservation and save federal tax dollars in the 2012 Farm Bill is to prioritize stewardship agreements that will protect wetlands, wildlife habitat and sensitive soils.

"Under specific provisions in federal farm law, farmers who accept taxpayers' money agree to provide basic stewardship of soil, water and wetlands," Redlin said. "This requires no additional federal dollars; in fact, it can result in budgetary savings, cleaner water and improved wildlife habitat."

For more information and a video link about the Izaak Walton League of America and the Farm Bill go to www.iwla.org/agconservation.

The South Dakota Farm Bill Forum is free and open to the public. To attend, RSVP by April 30 by contacting Gwen Steel at gsteel@iwla.org or (651) 649-1446.
