Archery

“It’s so different from shooting on your own home range,” Sejnoha said. “Everything is different, the lighting, what you’re looking at — everything.”

With a number of outdoor shoots coming up for Bartos and her fellow archers, the experience of a state tournament can be beneficial.

“It helps because it’s a high-pressure situation, and you have to get used to a huge environment,” Bartos said. “Everyone has pressure, one way or another.”

The introduction of Junior Olympic Archery Development (JOAD) programs in Yankton have also helped provide local and area shooters with top-level training, according to Sejnoha, who is on the JOAD Advanced Compound Team.

Ultimately, it’s a sport reliant on personal goals and achievement, she said.

“Archery is such a fun sport to be in because it’s individual,” Sejnoha said. “You can be on a team like basketball, and maybe you win state, but what if you didn’t play? Here, it’s totally on you.”

Of course, it doesn’t hurt to have one of the premier centers in the world at your disposal, Bartos added, smiling.

“We have one of the world’s greatest facilities right here in our town, but I think we sometimes take it for granted,” she said. “We go to all these bigger tournaments and people say how jealous they are.”

Such amenities have helped the sport grow, according to 16-year-old Yankton shooter Elliott Cull. Also a member of the JOAD program, Cull finished third in his age division at the state indoor competition.

“It’s getting bigger because I think people who have never tried are thinking about it because of the movies,” Cull said. “They find out how fun it is.”

Cull said he took two years off from the sport because it was “a little boring after a while.” Now, he’s back performing at a higher level and is “excited again for it.”

Archery has also made waves at the collegiate level, with the introduction and continued growth of the team at Mount Marty College.

Jamie Van Lent, an MMC senior who won the adult female freestyle division at the state tournament, said she enjoys the opportunity to compete locally and nationally.

“I like those local tournaments, because you don’t have to travel so far,” Van Lent said. “It’s still good experience because it’s big enough.”

The state indoor was Van Lent’s third tournament shooting from a wheelchair, following a skiing accident. Last week she started shooting again standing up, and plans to do so at the First Dakota Classic in Yankton from April 20-21.

“I’ll be ready for it,” Van Lent said.

The First Dakota Classic, however, is not the only major tournament coming to Yankton this month. The International Field Archery Association (IFAA) will hold its World Indoor Tournament from April 26-28 at the complex.

With that tournament comes some good-natured international ribbing, according to Tollefson, who coaches the young archers. He said among the phone calls he’s received was one from the South African coach.

“You know why we’re coming, right?” Tollefson said, quoting the coach. “We’re coming to beat you guys.’ So I guess it’s on now.”

majority of city commissioners have indicated that they would like the organization to adopt a single-stream recycling program. Do you agree with this, and is it important enough to contemplate raising the cost of service?

I would also like to see an adoption of single stream collection; however, the community needs to decide if they would like the city to retain local control or to privatize this collection. Local control could mean an increase of under $2 per household, while privatization could mean a savings to families. Either way, I believe this cost is low and something that our community should strongly consider.

5. The City Commission is working on a partnership with other organizations to conduct a housing study for Yankton.

Do you think this is a good idea? Why or why not?

I believe a housing study for Yankton should be conducted. Our community members deserve clean, affordable and safe housing. I have several friends and family members who have been unable to find adequate housing in the Yankton community. I’ve actually heard of several families moving away from Yankton to finding housing in surrounding communities because the lack of housing. If we want to keep our community members and attract future citizens, we need to conduct this study and plan accordingly.

6. Any closing thoughts?

Thank you for the opportunity of sharing my thoughts and visions of Yankton with you. While I know you have several candidates to consider this election, please remember that I am a hard working individual who is willing to work hard for the best interests of Yankton’s citizens. Please vote for me, Brooke Blaalid, on April 9 for Yankton City Commission.

Pope

The first pontiff to come from the Jesuits, an order with special concern for the poor, and the first pope to name himself after St. Francis, a medieval figure who renounced wealth to preach to the down-and-out, Francis lamented that the world is “still divided by greed looking for easy gain.”

Earlier, wearing cream-colored vestments, Francis celebrated Mass on the esplanade in front of the basilica at an altar set up under a white canopy. He frequently bowed his head as if in silent reflection.

Francis seems to bring good weather to Rome. As has happened on several of the other first public outdoor appearances of his fledgling papacy, huge throngs defied forecasts of heavy rain to turn out. They were rewarded by dry skies and some bursts of sun through clouds.

Vatican officials said by mid-ceremony, 250,000 people had come to the square, and thousands of others, including last-minute Romans, flocked to the square just in time to catch his blessing at the end.

The square was a panoply of floral color. Chilly winter has postponed the blossoming of many flowers. Yellow forsythia and white lilies shone, along with bursts of lavender and pink, from potted azalea, rhododendron, wisteria and other plants.

Francis thanked florists from the Netherlands for donating the flowers. He also advised people to let love transform their lives, or as he put it, “let those desert places in our hearts bloom.”

75 YEARS AGO

Friday, April 1, 1938

- The Springfield Times changed hands today April 1, when E. R. McClure of Tabor, Iowa took possession, having bought the plant and building from Roy King who had served as editor for the last several years. Mr. McClure has been editor of the Tabor (Iowa) Beacon for the last 20 years.
- Sheriff Wm. J. Limpo reported this morning that he has recovered a stolen automobile taken last Tuesday at Sanborn, Minn., and found parked Wednesday morning about 17 miles north of Yankton on U. S. highway No. 81. Sheriff Limpo received notification Wednesday that the car, which was owned by A. M. Altman of New Ulm, Minn., had been stolen and since then has been making an investigation and learned that the parties who stole the car got a lift to Yankton by a passing car and took a freight train out of town eastbound the same morning.

50 YEARS AGO

Monday, April 1, 1963

- Yankton county winners in the Keep South Dakota Green contest were announced today by Mrs. Alma Burke, county superintendent of schools. They are Ann Scott of Yankton junior high school in the essays class, Nadine Wootton of Yankton junior high in the poster class, and David A. Andersen of Sacred Heart School in the scrapbooks class.

- A fire late Saturday afternoon at a farm 3 1/2 miles northwest of Scotland resulted in the loss of four calves and milking equipment. The farm is owned by Ed English, Yankton, and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Furst.

25 YEARS AGO

Friday, April 1, 1988

- Trade barriers have taken one European market away from the Cimpr Packing Co., Yankton. John Cimpr, plant production superintendent and company vice president, said the company has not been able to sell beef tongues to France for about a year. Laddie Cimpr, company president, said the foreign countries provide a good market for variety meats such as tongue and heart which are less popular in the United States.
- Residents in Viborg will decide April 12 whether to allow the sale of liquor by the drink, something that has been banned since prohibition in 1919. Similar resolutions have been turned down a half-dozen times, the last time on a vote of 114-102 in 1985.

isn’t something that would be implemented all at one time.

“It would be similar to what was proposed at Memorial Pool — something that would be a phased plan that could be implemented in pieces,” Wenande stated.

It is expected that the upcoming report will contain options of putting facilities in different locations. Wenande said discussions have been conducted with those property owners.

The mayor said there is no hurry to finish a plan at this point.

“We don’t have a buyer for the (Human Services Center property the city purchased from the state last year) so soccer has to leave this fall,” she stated. “We’re not in that situation, for better or for worse. We just want to make sure we do it right and lay out something that is feasible and would make sense for the long-term growth of the city.”

Nelson said she thinks the sports entities understand nothing is going to change for them this season.

It will be important to maintain good communication with the associations as the plans proceed, Wenande added.

“We need to make sure they understand that, just because their project might not be the first one to take place, doesn’t mean that it’s not a priority or we’re not looking at it,” she said. “We all need to work together for any of this to happen. There needs to be mutual support between the organizations.”
