Dave Says

BY DAVE RAMSEY

Dear Dave,
 My younger sister moved to Atlanta, and she came to live with my husband and me a few months ago. She's 19, has a job, and is attending a local college. But even though she's working, she hasn't said anything about helping out with utilities or paying rent. We don't need the money, but do you think it's time for us to push her out of the nest so she can start living as an adult?

—Molly

Dear Molly,
 The way you've described your little sister makes me think she's a pretty good kid. She's doing all the right things for someone her age, and it doesn't sound like you've got a party animal or drug addict in your home. In my mind, this is the kind of person you want to help.

In a sense, you're acting as surrogate parents to this young lady. If it were my little sister, I'd let her live in the house without paying rent as long as she was living smart and moving in a positive direction. To me, this includes working, saving money, and going to college. At the moment, you're enabling good, positive behavior. You have a chance to be her biggest cheerleader and prepare her for the future.

Dear Dave,
 I have some old debts that have been forgiven. Should I still pay these if and when I have the money?

—Dave

Dear Matt,
 First, you need to double-check and make sure the debts have been officially forgiven. Commercial debts, such as old credit card debt, are almost never forgiven. They might be in default, or it may be that the company has written it off, but that's not the same as being forgiven.

—Matt

Years ago, my grandfather loaned me money when I was in college to pay for part of my tuition. He forgave that debt not long after, so I didn't owe him the money morally, legally or in any other way. But in a commercial setting, meaning you're dealing with a bank or other lender, that doesn't happen.

If a credit card company decides to take less than the original amount owed, that's a business decision that has changed the terms of the deal, both morally and legally. Sometimes they'd rather have a bird in the hand rather than promises in the bush. You don't have an obligation to pay the original amount because the terms of the deal have been altered.

Forgiven is forgiven. That means the deal and any obligation is completely wiped out and gone. But chances are, Chase or MasterCard aren't going to call you up and forgive the debt.

Historical Society: More Historic Photos Available

PIERRE — A grant received for the scanning of glass plates has made almost 600 images from a photo collection of the South Dakota State Historical Society-Archives at the Cultural Heritage Center in Pierre available to the public.

The grant allowed for the scanning of 589 glass plates from the Lester Black Collection. The images date from the late 1890s to 1910s. The State Historical Society received the glass plates in 1986.

To access the Lester Black digital collections, visit the State Archives website at www.history.sd.gov/archives and find the link to “Lester Black.”

The digitization and cataloging of glass plate negatives has been funded in part by a grant from the City of Deadwood and the Deadwood Historic Preservation Commission. In addition to the Lester Black Collection, other glass plate negative collections that have been digitized include the Myra Morton Miller, Eliza Dibble, and Wandell Mooney collections.

“The photo digitization project is allowing us to reformat the photos and place them in an easily accessible platform, the South Dakota Digital Archives,” said Chelle Somsen, state archivist. “These images of our state are a wonderful representation of early activities.”

Specific locations found within the Lester Black Collection include the Redfield College, Mount Rushmore, Devils Tower, Corn Palace, Sylvan Lake and the South Dakota State Fair.

Town images include Redfield, Gettysburg, Mitchell, Elk Point, Huron, Waubay, Hot Springs and Pierre.

Other topics include sod homes, Native American encampments, floods, railroad scenes, stone artifacts, farm scenes, automobiles, a balloon flight, baseball games, and family portraits.

The South Dakota Digital Archives, an online resource, was launched in January 2012 by the State Archives to provide researchers digital The photograph digitization project is funded by private donations and grants. If you are interested in sponsoring a photograph collection, contact the South Dakota Historical Society Foundation, the fund-raising partner of the State Historical Society, at (605) 773-6001.
