'Teach Children To Save Day'

Slated For April 23-25

First Dakota National Bank is partnering with Webster, Lincoln, Beadle & Sacred Heart grade schools to celebrate Teach Children to Save Day by educating about savings on April 23-25. More than 150 local second graders will explore not only smart but fun ways to save money. Along with the value that comes from saving and being responsible with their money.

Established by the American Bankers Association in 1997, Teach Children to Save Day has reached more than 5.6 million young people through the commitment of more than 121,000 banker volunteers.

"This program gives us the opportunity to use our life experiences and banking knowledge to motivate students to become lifelong savers," said Jill Hunhoff, Personal Banking Officer at First Dakota National Bank's Yankton downtown location.

"I hope they all take home the importance of saving and taking care of their money and shared it with their families. After all saving money is not easy at any age"

First Dakota offers the following tips for money-savvy parents raising money-smart kids:

- Set the example of a responsible money manager by paying bills on time, being a conscientious spender and an active saver. Children tend to emulate their parents' personal finance habits.
- Talk openly about money with your kids. Communicate your values and experiences with money. Encourage them to ask you questions, and be prepared to answer them - even the tough ones.
- Explain the difference between needs and wants, the value of saving and budgeting and the consequences of not doing so.
- Open a savings account for your children and take them with you to make deposits, so they can learn how to be hands-on in their money management.
- Let friends and family know about your child's savings goal. They'll be more likely to give cash for special occasions, which means more trips to the bank.
- Engage your community. Many schools, banks and community organizations share your commitment to creating a money-savvy generation. Engage a coalition of support to provide youth with the education they need to succeed.

The American Bankers Association provides financial education programs and resources that help bankers make their communities better. The association's signature programs, Teach Children to Save and Get Smart about Credit, bring bankers and students together to increase financial literacy.

who are involved in the emphasis we've created."

Sejnoha said there is also the potential to use some of the executives at Avera Sacred Heart as faculty members for the program.

"We've had several meetings with Pam Rezac (president/CEO of Avera Sacred Heart Hospital) and a pivotal point of those meetings was to be able to have the capabilities of utilizing the staff members at Avera as guest speakers and possibly adjunct faculty members," Tereshinski said. "We also found out that there are a number of other retired individuals in the community that can help us by serving as guest lecturers, as well."

Rezac said the partnership between Mount Marty and Avera with the new emphasis will not only help out students but will also help Avera, too.

"Health care systems such as Avera need to recruit talented, dedicated people to join the health care management and administrative teams to assist us in providing high-quality, accessible health care services to our communities," she said. "In addition, health care delivery is rapidly changing, and the expectations of patients demands a higher level of expertise in managing health care's valuable and limited resources."

Rezac added that the health care administrative team views the partnership with Mount Marty as a great opportunity to contribute its knowledge and expertise to the health care administrative profession.

"The partnership will also help to enhance the retention of current Avera Sacred Heart employees who may view the new health care administrative course offerings as a way to advance their own career options," she said. "Together, ASHH and MMC can maximize resources and combine our talents and expertise towards this mutual goal."

"Also, it should not be overlooked that both entities foster strong faith-based settings for learning, teaching and developing well-rounded and educated health care professionals."

Career options for students who choose to add the health care administration emphasis to their degree program include working in management at a health care facility, clinic or hospital.

Tereshinski said the addition of the health care administration option adds yet another option to the choices students at MMC have.

"This gives us another avenue for our business administration majors," he said. "This gives us a different track for our business administration students to take for when they graduate. The emphasis makes things more specific for the job market and employers, and also makes our graduates more marketable for the workforce."

Rezac said the evidence she's seen points to their being serious shortages of health care professionals sometime in the near future.

"The partnership is a natural fit for both ASHH and MMC, and will benefit the people of our region through the promotion of high quality health care services," she said.

City To Consider Property Transfer To NFAA

From P&D Staff Reports

The Yankton City Commission will consider a contribution of land, equipment and cash to the National Field Archery Association (NFAA) Monday.

The NFAA wants to expand the number of archery ranges and parking space at its headquarters on the east side of Yankton.

City officials have proposed that 12 acres of property formerly used for a landfill and now utilized for storage space be given to the NFAA for its expansion. If the archery organization decides it no longer wants the property in the future, ownership would revert back to the city.

Additionally, the city has offered to buy the NFAA a mower that costs $25,000 or less. Municipal employees would no longer provide property maintenance under the agreement, nor would the city be responsible for repairs to the mower.

In the final part of the proposal, the city would give the NFAA up to $38,000 to reimburse it for the purchase of materials used to construct a comfort station. The facility would be located on NFAA property, but a perpetual easement would be in place so the public would have access to it. The NFAA would agree to pay for any future maintenance to the comfort station.

In other business Monday, the City Commission will hold a public hearing on a water conservation ordinance, consider moving ahead with a housing study and hear a funding request from RiverWalk.

The meeting gets under way at 7 p.m. in the City of Yankton Meeting Room, located at the Technical Education Center, 1200 W. 21st St.
