Search For Missing State Prison Inmate

From P&D Staff Reports

A South Dakota prison inmate has been placed on escape status after leaving his community service work site without authorization Wednesday in Yankton.

According to a press release from the state Department of Corrections, John Collins was last seen at the work site in Yankton at approximately 3 p.m.

Collins, 30, is a white male with brown hair and blue eyes. He is 6 feet tall and weighs approximately 165 pounds.

Collins is currently serving a 10-year sentence for grand theft out of Lawrence County and a five-year sentence for forgery and a 10-year sentence for third-degree burglary out of Butte County.

Anyone who sees Collins or knows of his whereabouts should contact law enforcement immediately.

Parks Advisory Board To Meet Monday

City of Yankton Parks Advisory Board will meet at 5:30 p.m. Monday, April 6, at the Technical Education Center, 1200 West 21st St. This is an open meeting.

Education Conference Set For Rapid City

RAPID CITY — The annual South Dakota Early Childhood Education Conference will be held in Rapid City April 9-11 at the Best Western Ramkota Conference Center.

This conference is jointly facilitated by the South Dakota Head Start Association (SDHSA) and the South Dakota Association for the Education of Young Children (SDAAYC) and will bring 400-500 teachers, administrators, preschool and daycare providers, parents, presenters, and more to Rapid City for the three day event, which serves as the primary source of professional development and training for Early Childhood in the state.

The theme for this year's conference is "Building Strong Foundations for the Future," and features three keynote speakers, two pre-conference workshops, and more than 50 break-out sessions.

The conference will also feature 25 exhibitors and vendors. This information is also available on the SDECE Conference website. <http://sdececonference.org.doodlekit.com/home/sponsors> or call 605-224-4161.

Sobriety Checkpoints Planned In Area

PIERRE — The South Dakota Highway Patrol will conduct sobriety checkpoints throughout the state in April.

The checkpoints are planned for the counties of: Brookings, Brown, Brule, Butte, Clay, Codington, Day, Hanson, Hughes, McCook, Minnehaha, Minor, Pennington, Roberts, Sanborn and Spink.

The checkpoints are done as a way to discourage people from drinking and driving.

WASHINGTON — Sen. Mike Rounds (R-S.D.) has announced that his office is hosting a photo contest. He is seeking photos from across the state that highlight the unique scenery and landscape South Dakota has to offer. The top photo submissions will be featured on Rounds' social media pages and website.

"From rolling hills and canyons to fertile river beds and prairies, our state has some of the most unique and diverse landscape in the country," said Rounds. "I look forward to showcasing some of South Dakota's natural beauty and sharing your work with others."

Drier-Than-Average April Expected

BROOKINGS — The national climate forecast for April 2015, released March 31 by the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Climate Prediction Center, indicates drier-than-average conditions to continue in South Dakota and the Great Plains.

The drought outlook for the month ahead also shows likely expansion of drought across much of the state in the month ahead, said Laura Edwards, SDSU Extension Climate Field Specialist.

"This latest outlook projects an increased probability of drier than average conditions in South Dakota, Nebraska, and parts of surrounding states," Edwards said. "This is not good news for us, given that we are already going into the growing season with a moisture deficit from the last several months."

She did add that one benefit of dry conditions in the early growing season is that planting and field preparation for spring planted crops, such as corn and soybeans, can be completed faster and more efficiently without saturated soils or ponding, as has been seen in many recent years in the eastern part of the state.

"There is some concern already that winter wheat has had some frost damage following the brief thaw in February in the western and central counties," said Dennis Today, SDSU Extension Climate Specialist & South Dakota State Climatologist. "For the wheat that did survive the warm period, now the lack of precipitation is a growing concern."

He added that there was also winter wheat that did not emerge last fall because of the dry conditions.

With the dry outlook for the month ahead, the NOAA Climate Prediction Center also projects further expansion of drought conditions across most of South Dakota by month's end.

Edwards suggested this may be a conservative estimate, as wildland fire activity continues in the western counties, an area that is not included in the expansion of drought in the drought outlook map.

"Wildland fire is a complicated indicator of drought," Edwards said.

She explained that it relies on the wet years, such as 2013 and 2014, to grow vegetation to provide fuel for the fires.

"The lack of precipitation since last fall has sufficiently dried out the vegetation to cause the fire hazards that we are seeing now," Edwards said.

Today said drought conditions in the state are likely to get worse before they get better this spring.

"Now is the time to think about how to conserve moisture on the farm, and consider chemical and fertilizer application plans with the dry climate outlook," he said.

Reducing tillage and planting rates may be some other considerations.

He added that the long-range outlooks beyond April are still a little mixed, but currently offer a bit more hope for precipitation.

Throughout the 2015 growing season, SDSU Extension will provide climate updates. For more information, visit iGrow.org.
