Policy

They agreed by consensus that a reference to WPATH standards of care should be removed because, in the opinion of various people, the organization promotes transgender as a choice.

That is the acronym for World Professional Association for Transgender Health.

Several directors also suggested they revisit the SDHSAA policy's requirement that an athlete could change her or his gender identity only once during the athlete's high school eligibility.

That part of the policy is intended to force the athlete and family members to reach a binding decision before seeking the change in gender identity in order to compete as a member of the opposite sex.

The coming survey will ask school officials to consult with their school district's legal counsel regarding whether the transgender policy would be better to continue as a state-wide policy, or be made the responsibility of each school system to decide.

If the directors decide at the June meeting to formally consider changes, the final decision would come at the August meeting. The date of that meeting hasn't been officially set yet.

Director Jason Uttermark of Aberdeen said the SDHSAA
