CORRECTIONS

In Monday's Press & Dakotan, Mount Marty College Director of Bands Dean Rettedal was misidentified in the photo shown at right. We apologize for this error. Rettedal (also shown above acknowledging a standing ovation from audience at Marian Auditorium after the final song in Sunday night's performance of the MMC Concert Band) is retiring from the school after 33 years. He was presented a certificate of appreciation Sunday by Yankton Mayor Dave Carda on behalf of the Yankton City Commission. Some former MMC students who were directed by Rettedal through the years joined the concert band on stage Sunday night for one final song with their former bandleader. (Kelly Hertz/P&D)

SD State Vets, Diagnostic Lab Prepared For Dog Flu

BROOKINGS — The new strain of flu that affected more than 1,000 dogs in Chicago has not yet spread to South Dakota, but SDSU veterinarians advise owners to be vigilant. Dogs experience the same influenza symptoms as humans — fever, runny nose and cough that then leads to lethargy and lack of appetite. Owners should take dogs exhibiting these symptoms to their veterinarians, according to State public health and SDSU Extension veterinarian Russ Daly. "There are a lot of things that can cause respiratory problems in dogs — not all are influenza-related," he said, including the more common kennel cough. To test for influenza, a veterinarian will swab the animal's nose and throat and send the samples to the Animal Disease Research and Diagnostic Laboratory at SDSU. ADRDL director Jane Christopher-Hennings, who is also a veterinarian, said that samples should be taken within two to four days after clinical symptoms develop. "Otherwise we may not be able to detect it, since the virus is only shed for that short period of time after clinical symptoms begin" she added. Typically samples are processed the same day they are received. The veterinarian will develop a care plan for those dogs that test positive, Hennings explained. They should be isolated from other dogs. "If your dog has symptoms, don't take it to a daycare or kennel." The virus is spread through nose-to-nose contact, according to Daly. "They pretty much have to breathe the same air." "It's a pretty flimsy virus once it leaves the animal's body," Daly noted. Even if an infected animal sneezes on a ramp at a dog park, for instance, another dog would have to lick the ramp within three to four minutes to contract the virus. However, he pointed out that the new H3N2 strain seems more virulent than the H3N8 strain that affected dogs in 2004 and 2005. Though a vaccine was developed in 2009 for the older strain, experts are uncertain whether it will offer any protection. "These vaccines tend to be pretty strain specific," Daly added.
