$7KRaised For*Neb. Boy's*Headstone

MINDEN, Neb. (AP) — A memorial drive to place a headstone at the grave of 4-year-old Landon Payne raised more than $7,500.

The little boy was the victim of child abuse, Kearney County authorities have said.

The fund drive began Aug. 2 with the opening of a bank account. It ended Wednesday, and organizer Jacquie Harsins said $7,534 was raised.

Harsins said the funeral home would accept only $500 for the headstone. The rest of the money will be given to the Child Abuse Resource Education program on Friday, she said. The program is affiliated with the Community Action Partnership of Mid-Nebraska.

A separate group has organized a candlelight vigil in Landon's memory. It is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. Friday at Yanney Heritage Park in Kearney.

Landon died on Dec. 22 at a Kearney hospital of injuries suffered at a home in rural Kearney County.

Sharon Turnell, 36, her husband, Charles Turnell, 37, and her daughter, Katie Payne, 19, have been charged with aiding and abetting intentional child abuse that resulted in a death. Landon was Sharon Turnell's nephew and Katie's cousin.

All three have denied causing Landon's death, telling police that the boy fell from a bunk bed. But doctors told police that Landon had several injuries in various stages of healing. The injuries were more consistent with child abuse, the doctors said.

Trial dates for the Turnells and Katie Payne in Kearney County District Court have not been scheduled yet.

Sturgis' Buffalo Chip May Have To Move

BY BARBARA SODERLIN
Rapid City Journal

STURGIS — The decision last year by Meade County commissioners not to pursue building a truck route around Sturgis means the Buffalo Chip might have to move, owner Rod Woodruff says.

The campground and concert venue will celebrate its 30th anniversary next year, and even at 64 years old, Woodruff isn't ready to retire. But if business is going to keep growing, Woodruff said, it's going to need to be somewhere else.

"Where I'm at now with the Buffalo Chip is it really can't continue to grow much here, because I'm in a bad location," he said. "I have to have a different location. I don't have a road to get people here. My business has been choked."

The campground venue is east of Sturgis past where Highway 34 turns northeast. Bikers coming there to camp or take in a concert like Bob Dylan's on Tuesday night have to navigate stop-and-go traffic as they head past three other venues: the Full Throttle Saloon, the Glencoe CampResort and the newer Monkey Rock.

The Buffalo Chip website warns campers about the traffic and recommends alternate routes such as side streets and gravel country roads. But without going miles out of their way, bikers coming from the east, south or west have no other highway from which to access the venue.

The Meade County Commission in February defeated a plan to extend and possibly widen 131st Street between Highway 79 and Interstate 90's Exit 37, Pleasant Valley Road.

The commission heard concerns not only from downtown Sturgis business owners, worried that a bypass would hurt their shops, but also from county residents, who said a road to help a few campgrounds shouldn't be a priority over the cost of maintaining existing county roads. They also were concerned about the impact of development to the rural area.

Commission Chairman Robert Malow said he initially favored the bypass, but changed his mind when he weighed the cost against other county needs.

"I agree with (Woodruff)," Malow said. "It is a bottleneck out there with four campgrounds."

He said the county has tried to work with the campgrounds to move traffic more efficiently. The campgrounds contributed financially to widening Highway 34 to four lanes several years ago.

Malow said a bypass would help more than just the campgrounds. It would help ranchers and truckers from Butte County and north access I-90 more quickly.

The issue isn't closed off from future discussion, but Malow said there are no immediate plans to revisit it.

The idea of a bypass or truck route around Sturgis has been debated for decades, Department of Transportation region engineer Todd Seaman said.

"I personally went to meetings 20 years ago" on the topic, he said.

He doesn't foresee the road being built any time soon. The priority right now for state transportation funds is to maintain existing roads.

Even if the county and campground owners came up with the $11 million to $12 million it would take to build the two-lane truck route, Seaman said, it would still take about five years to complete the planning process.

"That's a lot of money to spend where the greatest benefit would be during the rally," Seaman said, though he agreed there would be other benefits such as faster emergency response and better transportation for truckers and ranchers.

In the meantime, the Department of Transportation works to ease the bottleneck by installing temporary traffic signals that are manually adjusted as needed to maximize traffic flow.

Woodruff didn't say if he was actively looking to sell the current Buffalo Chip property or buy property elsewhere. The growth opportunity available when he took over the Chip in the early 1980s doesn't exist today at his current location, he said.

"This business is really just getting started. We could grow into a very big deal, I believe, over the next decade," he said. "(But) we can't, politically, get infrastructure here to warrant that investment. It's as good as it's probably going to get here."

Woodruff did say he wants to stay in the Hills, connected to the rally.

"What we have built with all the folks who come here is, we are a destination resort for the western South Dakota tourism industry," he said. "I need to be in western South Dakota, somewhere where there are wide open spaces somewhere in the Black Hills."

Woodruff said he doesn't want to grow by opening a second Chip location, whether it would be a bar or other type of venue, in South Dakota or, say, Las Vegas.

"I get requests all the time to go other places and lend my name to other things," he said. "There can only be one Buffalo Chip."

Eggs, Beef Filets Recalled

The following recall has been announced:

— All lots of 10-ounce "Beef Filet Squares" for dogs and "Texas Hold'em's" pet treats made by Merrick Pet Care Inc. of Amarillo, Texas, because they may be contaminated with salmonella. People handling the treats can become infected with salmonella, especially if they have not thoroughly washed their hands after having contact.

Healthy people infected with salmonella should monitor themselves for some or all of the following symptoms: nausea, vomiting, diarrhea or bloody diarrhea, abdominal cramping and fever. Pets with salmonella infections may be lethargic and have diarrhea or bloody diarrhea, fever and vomiting.

Consumers with questions can contact the company at 800-664-7387 Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. EDT.

— Certain shell eggs produced by the farms of Wright County Egg of Galt, Iowa, because they have the potential to be contaminated with salmonella.

Eggs affected by this recall were distributed to food wholesalers, distribution centers and food service companies in California, Illinois, Missouri, Colorado, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa. These companies distribute nationwide.

Eggs are packaged under the following brand names: Lucerne, Albertain, Mountain Dairy, Ralph's, Boomsma's, Sunshine, Hillandale, Traffacanda, Farm Fresh, Shoreland, Lund, Dutch Farms and Kemps. The eggs are packed in varying carton sizes.

This recall is of shell eggs only. Other egg products produced by Wright County Eggs are not affected. Consumers with questions can visit <http://www.eggssafety.org>.

Sioux Falls Learning Center Loses Funding

SIoux FALLS (AP) — Officials are trying to keep afloat a center in Sioux Falls that helps people earn a high school or general equivalency diploma after the state cut funding this year.

The Floyd Career Learning Center now is charging some fees for services that before were free, and hoping people in the community might wish to fund scholarships.

"We agonized over charging fees," program coordinator Jill Storm said. "It was either close the doors or charge fees."

The center run by the Volunteers of America group began in 1983 as the first of its kind in South Dakota. Since then, it has helped more than 1,900 people.

Federal money coming to the state to help pay for adult education has been reduced in recent years, said State Labor Department spokeswoman Dawn Doyre. The South Dakota Workforce Development Council recommended that funding be eliminated for the Sioux Falls center.

Some of the services are offered by Lutheran Social Services and Southeast Technical Institute, Doyre said.

Storm said the Floyd Career Learning Center provides personalized instruction that isn't always available elsewhere. The center also offers child care and support services for its students.

Hansen said. "He was our interpreter when we went on a mission team (to Haiti) 20 years ago. So I've been in contact with him the whole time."

Since that time, Hansen and Fritznier have worked together with the non-profit group they started called Helping Hands for Haiti.

"Fritz is our coordinator in Haiti, so it's wonderful that his eyesight is being helped, so he will be able to continue his duties there with our organization," Hansen said.

He added that while they haven't been able to affect "the masses in Haiti," they have been able to help some people.

"We built a school in Haiti, and we are in the process of moving to another village to start again with another school there," Hansen said. "But we've responded to some of the calamities that happened in Haiti, like the earthquake. Also, they've had hurricanes. So we have a presence in Haiti and we're able to provide some much-needed help to the people there."

"Haiti is such a poverty-ridden country and people have no opportunity," he said. "People are willing to work and able to work, but they have no job opportunities. The government is corrupt. It's a sad situation. But with people like Fritz who are concerned about their country, we've been able to help in several of the villages."

Fritznier said he has paid tribute to Hansen in his own way.

"I have a godson, so I gave him the name Irener because (Hansen) is from Irene," he said. "That's my gratitude to him, to prove to him that I love him very much. I appreciate everything he did for my country Haiti, and for me, too. ... I love him very much."

Presently, Fritznier is focused on the clean-up efforts in the wake of the massive earthquake that rocked his country in January.

He was one of the lucky ones, he said.

"I had some damage in the house, but the most important thing was God saved me," Fritznier said. "Many, many, many people got killed. I wasn't buried, so it's by his grace that I got saved."

Hansen visited the country one month before the earthquake and one month later.

"It's just devastating to see all the damage that was done," he said. "Buildings were flattened, and there were still bodies in those buildings because the rubble hadn't been cleared up."

Fritznier conceded that clean-up efforts will take time, but seeing their effects each day has been difficult.

"They're beginning to clean the city, but it's too slow," he said. "For me, it's too slow."

In the meantime, he'll continue to work with the group he and Hansen helped to organize.

"This is God's plan for me and him," Fritznier said. "Without God, he would not have been able to reach me, and also me (for him)."
