Study: Smoking Scenes On The Decline In Top Movies

BY STEPHANIE NANO
 Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — There's a lot less smoking in the movies these days, a new report shows.

Tobacco use on the silver screen peaked in 2005 and has been on the decline since, according to research that looked at the most popular films from 1991 to 2009.

Last year more than half of the 145 top movies released didn't show any smoking at all. That's a record for the past two decades. For films aimed at children or teens, the percentage was even higher — 61 percent. However, 54 percent of the movies rated PG-13 did show tobacco use.

The report "shows that Hollywood is perfectly capable of making movies without as much smoking and people still come see them," said the study's lead author, Stan Glantz, director of the Center for Tobacco Control Research and Education at the University of California, San Francisco.

The report was released Thursday in a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention publication.

Glantz and others have been pressuring movie studios for years to cut out smoking in movies marketed to children and teens. Those efforts appear to be paying off, with studios adopting policies on smoking and putting anti-smoking messages on DVDs that depict smoking, he said.

The amount of smoking in PG-13-rated movies is of particular concern, though, because that's where teens view it most, he said. The more on-screen smoking they see, the more likely they are to pick up the habit themselves, the study's authors say.

"There's a declining trend — which is good to see — but we haven't made nearly enough progress," said Ursula Bauer of the CDC.

After years of decline, the smoking rate for high school students has stalled at 1 in 5, which Bauer said could be partly due to the promotion of smoking in movies.

For their study, the researchers tracked tobacco use in the most popular films for nearly two decades. Included were the top 50 films for the years 1991-2001, and films ranked in the weekly top 10 from 2002-2009. They counted the number of times tobacco use was shown.

From a peak of nearly 4,000 in 2005, the number dropped steadily to 1,935 last year.

Since 2007, the Motion Picture Association of America has considered smoking as a factor in its rating system, noting when cigarette use has affected the rating. For example, the PG-13 rating for "Avatar" included "some smoking."

Neb. Lawmakers Told No More Fat To Cut

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska lawmakers have been told that the fat has been cut and the next step is to trim and eliminate programs in the Department of Education to help close a large state-budget gap.

Nebraska Education Commissioner Roger Breed described to the Legislature's Education Committee on Thursday the possible effects of cutting state-funded programs in the department by 10 percent. Among the options are reducing both the number of disabled people who get help from the department to join the work force, and students who take statewide writing tests.

"There's no one that supports these cuts," Breed told the committee of the options he presented. "We're now down to the point we're having to eliminate programs," he said later.

The Education Committee will later decide whether to include those options on its list of budget-cutting suggestions for the full Legislature to consider when it convenes in January. Legislative committees are identifying possible cuts totaling 10 percent of state general-fund appropriations for all agencies under their purview.

The cumulative list will help the Legislature when it begins addressing a budget gap fiscal analysts have said could be several hundred million dollars during the next two-year budget cycle.

Breed told lawmakers that cutting the vocational rehabilitation program for disabled people by about $354,000 would trigger the loss of up to $1.3 million in federal funds.

Rhoades also said they hope to build a large collection of photos on the website both from the past and of current events.

If you have photos that you would like to submit, e-mail Rhoades via the website at www.yad.k12.sd.us and then follow the alumni/foundation tab.

"The whole purpose of this site is to stay connected with the school," Rhoades said. "We are not going to be soliciting money from you like a college. However, if you want to donate to the foundation, that is fine. We want to broaden and strengthen the connections from the school and give people one place to go to connect with classmates and friends from when they were at Yankton High School."
