various places at the two farms.

FDA Deputy Commissioner Dr. Joshua Sharfstein said the investigators are not just looking at the feed, but at the "overall contamination of the facility." Contamination found in the feed could be a part of a larger problem, he said.

"While they have found it in the feed they are not confirming any sort of cause and effect relationship," he said.

The feed mill where the salmonella was found operates as part of the Wright County Egg facility and also provides feed to Hillandale Farms. Officials said they are not sure whether the feed came to the farm contaminated or was contaminated at the farms. They said there is no evidence at this time that the feed went to any other farms.

Congress is hoping to get more answers from the two farms, the FDA and the Agriculture Department in September. A House Energy and Commerce subcommittee announced it adjuster to look at the home. No decisions about the future of the home would be made until a structural engineer could assess its condition, Opsahl added.

"That facility has cared for a number of families in the Menno community, providing funeral services to them," he said. "A lot of families have trusted their loved ones to that funeral home. It's not something you take lightly. It would be nice if we could maintain the facility the way it was and continue to serve Menno in that way."

"The funeral home will rebound," Opsahl continued. "That's just a matter of time and working on it. It isn't going to happen overnight. We're going to have to be patient, but the pieces of the puzzle will come together."

Funeral home staff have been overwhelmed by the calls of support and the offers of prayers. "That has meant so much to everyone here at the funeral home," Opsahl said.

He is just grateful that Aisenbrey and her family are safe.

"To say this was a close call is an understatement," he said. "This family is extremely lucky. Menno is extremely lucky there weren't more fatalities."

Aisenbrey agreed. "We have to be thankful there weren't eight or nine of us (killed). You just say a lot of prayers and be thankful for what we do have," she said. "The stuff in the house can always be replaced, or you forget about it. Gail is the biggest tragedy."

Now, Opsahl said the most important thing is attending to the needs of her family.

"First and foremost to me right now is the Guthmiller family, walking them through the steps of saying good-bye to a daughter, a sister," he said. "Our hearts and prayers go out to them."

will hold a hearing on the recall Sept. 14.

The committee is inviting Austin "Jack" DeCoster, the owner of Wright County Egg, and Orland Bethel, the owner of Hillandale Farms, to testify. The panel is doing an investigation into the recall and has written both farms, asking about company operations, communications with the government and what they knew and when.

The panel has also written the FDA, which oversees the safety of shell eggs, and the Agriculture Department, which oversees other egg products and the health of the hens. The committee asked for records of inspections and past communications with the two farms, along with other documents. The FDA has said it has "no inspectional history" with the two farms.

Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., who heads the spending committee that oversees the FDA and USDA, has also written letters to the two agencies.

A spokeswoman for Wright County Egg would not say if DeCoster will attend the September hearing, but said the company is "working right now" to respond to the committee.

"We will approach it in the same forthright manner as we have in our cooperation with FDA to date," said Hinda Mitchell.

DeCoster, who has paid millions of dollars in fines over the last 20 years for health, safety, immigration and environmental violations, has not responded to interview requests.

A worker at his office's headquarters near Galt, Iowa on Wednesday said he wasn't available, and in his home in Clarion, Iowa on Wednesday, his wife Patricia also said he was not around. She said the last few weeks "have been quite a time for us" but declined further comment.

A spokeswoman for Hillandale Farms also said the company is reviewing the committee's questions and "expect to cooperate in the same open manner as we have with the FDA."

FDA officials have said they don't expect the recall to grow beyond the two farms. The number of illnesses, which can be life-threatening, especially to those with weakened immune systems, is expected to increase.

Thoroughly cooking eggs can kill the bacteria. But health officials are recommending people throw away or return the recalled eggs.
