Road

"This is really the first major work that these cranes have had since they were installed in the 1950s," he said. "It's pretty extensive work and very important that we get it done."

The decision to close Crest Road during the work week was a safety issue, Becker said.

"Since we only have a single lane on the road, we didn't want to have people (traveling) under the crane while they were working on it," he said. "We didn't think it would be fair to (motorists or) our contractors or give them a safe environment."

The power plant staff adjusted the Crest Road traffic light for the heavier traffic on weekends, Becker said.

"They set the timers so it runs way more vehicles on a cycle than they normally do," he said. "The traffic lights were formerly running with one or two people waiting on the average weekend. Now, they have lengthened out the cycle so there's 10 cars waiting and it keeps more traffic flowing at once."

Becker emphasized that, contrary to rumors, the weekday road closure wasn't implemented because the road and dam were weak and couldn't withstand the vibrations of traffic.

"The dam is really performing well this year," he said. "The spillway and the power plant have been handling an extreme (challenging) year very well. We have had issues to deal with, but there are no big problems caused by it."

Jobs

keep federal airport operations running.

Arguably, not one contributed to job growth. Republicans say that spending cuts in a 2011 budget act and the debt act will stimulate the private sector. Democrats retort that reductions in federal investment in infrastructure and new technology are job killers.

The two parties were quick to blame each other when the Labor Department announced Friday that the unemployment rate in July was 9.1 percent, barely changed from the previous month.

Obama has previously called on Congress to put aside the blame game long enough to act on the patent and trade bills. "There are also things that Congress could do right now that will help create good jobs. Right now, Congress can send me a bill that would make it easier for entrepreneurs to patent a new product or idea," he said at a June 29 news conference.

"Right now," he added, "Congress can advance a set of trade agreements that would allow American businesses to sell more of their goods and services to countries in Asia and South America."

The patent bill will be at the top of the agenda when the Senate reconvenes in September. The first major overhaul of the patent system since 1952 has already passed both the Senate and the House by wide margins, and the Senate will be trying to agree to the similar House version and send it to the president for his signature.
