CHICAGO (AP) — Embattled Cubs pitcher Carlos Zambrano says he'd like to pitch again for Chicago and was simply frustrated when he told club personnel he wanted to retire after his most recent start.

Volatile Starter Zambrano Wants To Stay With Cubs

people come and I'm still there. ... I want to keep pitching for the Cubs. It was a moment of frustration Friday night, and I pitched so bad I wanted to retire, you know, I don't want to be making $18 million and pitch crap.

Warrant Issued In Ohio Death Of Former USD Football Player

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A warrant has been issued for a man suspected in the slaying of a former University of South Dakota football player and University of Kentucky basketball player.

Police in Columbus, Ohio, said Monday they filed an aggravated murder warrant for 35-year-old Richard Lee Willis of Columbus in the July 25 death of Desmond Allison. Willis hasn't yet been apprehended.

Authorities say Allison and a friend who survived, 36-year-old Malcolm Goff, were shot multiple times outside an apartment complex.

Goff and another friend of the 31-year-old Allison have said the killing may have stemmed from an argument between two women over a baseball cap. Police have said they believe the argument and shooting were related.

Allison played for the Kentucky Wildcats from 1998-2000. In his last season, he averaged 8.9 points per game and 4.4 rebounds.

Jenkins Joined Vikings For A Reason: Familiarity

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Here's a little-known piece of background on wide receiver Michael Jenkins: He picked up bowling as a hobby in college.

Familiar faces — and a playbook he's comfortable with — have helped Jenkins get that metaphorical ball rolling in Minnesota more quickly. The transition to a new team for Jenkins hasn't been as awkward or difficult as it can be for a guy trying to grasp a new scheme, and there are a couple of reasons.

"It's a big help from me on the learning curve," said Jenkins, who joined the Vikings a few weeks ago after he was cut by the Atlanta Falcons to clear room under the salary cap.

Vikings wide receivers coach George Stewart held that job with the Falcons during Jenkins' first three years in the league, 2004 to 2006. Bill Musgrave, hired this year by the Vikings to be their offensive coordinator, was the quarterbacks coach for the Falcons from 2006 to 2010.

"We're excited, because he knows our system a little bit better than everybody else," Musgrave said.

Familiarity was an even stronger force in the post-lockout chaos that was NFL free agency last month.

Without the usual spring and summer practice time to pick up a new system, let alone become proficient in it, going to a place where the responsibilities are similar and the playbook terminology isn't like a foreign language was just as attractive to many players as top money, contract length and playing time opportunity.

Ex-Vikings quarterback Tarvaris Jackson and wide receiver Sidney Rice chose Seattle, where offensive coordinator Darrell Bevell had already arrived after being let go by Minnesota. Wide receiver Roy Williams went to Chicago, where offensive coordinator Mike Martz has installed the system Williams ran under Martz with Detroit in 2006-07.

So for Jenkins, this is a fresh start, with the extra benefit of institutional knowledge.

"This is a good opportunity for me to still go out and show what I have left," Jenkins said. "I'm excited about helping this football team win ballgames."

Drafted in the first round out of Ohio State, Jenkins has never come close to a 1,000-yard season and has only 20 touchdowns over seven seasons. He was overshadowed in the Falcons' passing attack by Roddy White, an All-Pro pick last year, and even tight end Alge Crumpler earlier in his career. Stewart said Jenkins came out of college with a 4.38-second time in the 40-yard dash, though these days his game is fueled more on "deceptive speed," as Jenkins put it.

He's 6-foot-4 with long strides, strong hands, and an ability to make tough catches in traffic and block in the running game. He has brought an attitude, too, impressing coach Leslie Frazier.

The loss of Rice will hurt the Vikings, even though his hip injury essentially ruined his 2010 season. But they still have Percy Harvin's speed and strength underneath and even out of the backfield, the deep-threat speed of Bernard Berrian, who is trying to bounce back from consecutive seasons of minimal production and a disconnection with Brett Favre, and the sure hands of Greg Camarillo. Jenkins appears to be the right kind of player to add to the group.

"He works extremely hard. He's always prepared. He knows this offense very well, so that's a plus for the rest of our guys who can come up and ask him questions," Frazier said Monday. "But just his professionalism is the one thing that sticks out to me, his attention to detail and how much he wants to be good. That's a good thing for a veteran receiver."

Jenkins said he considers himself a professional off the field, too — namely at the alley. He started bowling on a weekly basis at Ohio State and in Atlanta he even joined a Tuesday night league.

"Got my own bag, ball, shoes," he said, smiling.

He's already found a lane with the Vikings. They're counting on more than a few strikes from him, too.

Huskers

tiste, Kenny Bell and converted quarterback Jamal Turner.

Caputo and Sirles are the returning starters on the offensive line, but there will be new starters at right tackle and both guard spots.

The defense will have to contend with more physical offenses than the spread systems common in the Big 12.

The Huskers have plenty of left up front. Jared Crick is a national honors candidate and on track to become Nebraska's first three-time all-conference pick since 1997-99. Baker Steinkuhler and Cameron Meredith are back, and converted linebacker Eric Martin is being counted on to be a big playmaker at end.

The linebacker corps is led by Lavonte David, who set a school record with 152 tackles last season. Sean Fisher returns from a broken leg, and Will Compton figures to get more playing time as the Huskers return to using more three-linebacker alignments.

Dennard, who intercepted four passes and broke up another 15, steps out of the shadow of New York Giants first-round pick Prince Amukamara. Ciente Evans probably will take Amukamara's spot, and the Huskers have three experienced safeties.

Maybe the biggest hole is at place-kicker. Alex Henery was Nebraska's all-time leading scorer and the most accurate field-goal kicker in NCAA history. He also was one of the nation's top punters the past two seasons.

Brett Maher looks to be the new punter, but he'll have to beat out freshman Mauro Bondi for the kicking job.

UND to keep them.

The board's decision Monday directs Kelley to "substantially complete" the process of retiring the logo and nickname by the end of December.

Grant Shaft, the board's president, said NCAA officials were sympathetic to the university's plight during last week's meeting, which was held at the NCAA's headquarters in Indianapolis.

"The NCAA seemed to acknowledge the difficult position that the University of North Dakota was in, being that it was trying to comply with both the settlement agreement and the NCAA policy, along with the legislative mandate," Shaft said.

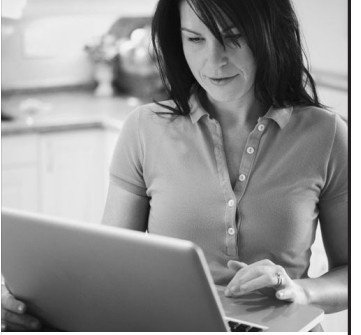

UND is attempting to join the Big Sky Conference next year as part of its switch to the NCAA's Division I, and Shaft said the association intended to ask for the understanding of conference officials in the nickname and logo dispute.

Big Sky officials have said the problem would complicate UND's prospective conference membership.

Stenehjem said the NCAA would "try to minimize any problems we might have as we seek to enter the Big Sky Conference."
