Storms

"The main roof on the fire station is OK, but the metal part of the roof facing the north had some damage," he stated.

The Kids Fire Safety Trailer lost windows and had dents, Nickles added.

Along Murphy Lane, Tom Fiedler had a broken window, damaged siding and he also suspected some roof damage. He said that, as he watched the hail descend, he felt mad.

"It really hammered when it started," he said. "I don't like hail because of the damage it does."

Fiedler has had more experience with hail than he cares to remember. When the severe hail storm pummeled Yankton on Thursday, July 9, 2009, with golf ball-sized hail, it damaged his gutters.

That early morning hail storm also broke many windows, damaged roofs and siding, and downed tree branches in northern Yankton. Home repair companies were busy fixing the devastation that storm left well into 2010.

Farther north at Sutton Place Apartments in the 2900 block of Douglas, Richard Deazer said Thursday evening that he was near a window watching television when the storm hit.

"All the glass and everything started coming in," he said. "It was like machine-gun fire."

The four north windows on his apartment were broken, as were many others in the complex. A disaster restoration crew was already on site repairing the damage.

John Yaggie, who farms just east of Yankton, said he sustained substantial crop damage.

"It's some of the same zone that got hit back in 2009," he said. "Some of the corn is defoliated with just the ears and the stalks left. It's hard to say how that will mature."

Soybeans are also stripped, Yaggie said.

"They don't have much foliage left, and a lot of pods are on the ground," he stated. "Time will tell, but it's not looking good."

Earlier in the day, Yaggie said he had marveled at how great his crops looked.

"How things change," he continued. "That's farming. It's the biggest gamble in town. But you have to have optimism if you farm."

Darrell Nielson of Mission Hill told The Associated Press that hail injured cattle and also flattened corn and soybeans in the area.

The Associated Press also reported that the first storm dropped 1.17 inches of rain in Yankton within about 15 minutes. The unofficial total rainfall at Chan Gurney Airport was two inches, though Scherschligt said he had received unconfirmed reports of three to five inches of rain within the city.

Kevin Carda of Farmers Insurance in Yankton told The Associated Press that his company had fielded dozens of calls concerning all types of damage.

He said this storm appears to have caused more damage than the hail storm in 2009, in part because the winds were apparently stronger than with the previous storm.

Reports to the National Weather Service included golf ball-size hail four miles east of Lesterville, nickel-size hail five miles west-southwest of Scotland and quarter-size hail eight miles west of Springfield.

White House Asks Agencies To Propose Budgets Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Obama administration wants agencies to propose ways of cutting spending by 10 percent or more in the 2013 budget year.

In a letter released Thursday, White House budget chief Jacob Lew told agency heads to submit financial blueprints with spending at least 5 percent below this year's levels. He also asked them to present additional proposals that would trim spending by at least 10 percent.

The effort is aimed at living within the debt ceiling agreement the two parties recently hammered out. It included a series of spending targets and saved tens of billions of dollars in 2013.

"By providing budgets pegged to these two scenarios, you will provide the president with the information to make the tough choices necessary to meet the hard spending targets in place and the needs of the nation," Lew wrote.

The White House has asked agencies in past years to propose similar savings. But Lew's letter underscores the political positioning under way as President Barack Obama and congressional Republicans approach what is likely to be a fiery autumn battle over budget and economic issues.

With the economy flagging, Republicans say tax and spending cuts are what is needed. Obama plans a jobs proposal mixing tax cuts with construction initiatives. At the same time, a special new committee of lawmakers will try developing a compromise $1.5 trillion, 10-year package of debt reduction.

The fight will carry over from the partisan battle over increasing the nation's borrowing limit; that consumed much of the spring and summer. It was resolved two weeks ago when the two sides agreed to try finding enough savings to reduce red ink by more than $2 trillion over the coming decade.

Oil Drops On Economic News, Demand Worries

BY CHRIS KAHN
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK — Oil fell sharply Thursday along with a broad sell-off in stocks triggered by worries about the global economy.

In the U.S., two reports raised concerns about demand for gasoline, which is made from oil. First, more people than expected applied for unemployment benefits last week. And prices for gas, food and clothing rose last month.

Higher prices at a time when more people are out of work means Americans could drive even less than they do now. A private survey released earlier this week said U.S. motorists have reduced gasoline purchases for 21 straight weeks.

Gasoline, on average, cost $3.59 a gallon Thursday. That's down 10 percent from a 2011 high of $3.98 on May 5. Gasoline should fall as low as $3.25 between mid-September and mid-October if oil stays at current levels, says Tom Kloza, publisher and chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service.

Pump prices should fall for other reasons as well.

Motorists tend to drive less in the fall once vacation season ends. Refineries also begin making winter versions of gasoline, which are less expensive because they contain less expensive additives than summer blends.

"All of that adds up to weaker prices in September," Kloza says.

Gasoline's low for the year was $3.07 a gallon on Jan. 3.

Benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for September delivery fell $5.20, or 5.9 percent, to finish at $82.38 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Brent crude, used to price many international oil varieties, dropped $3.61 to end at $106.99 per barrel on the ICE Futures exchange in London.

Prices have swung wildly with every report about the U.S. economy. Besides data about unemployment and prices, a private research group forecast sluggish growth for the rest of the year. Oil demand was supposed to pick up in the second half of 2011, but traders now wonder if it will happen.

"People are getting spooked," oil trader Stephen Schork says.

Meanwhile Libyan rebels claimed control over the country's last functioning oil refinery. Michael Lynch, president of Strategic Energy & Economic Research, says it's reasonable to expect Moammar Gadhafi's departure and a resumption of at least some Libyan exports by the end of the year. Libya's daily exports of almost 2 million barrels of crude have been shut down since unrest began in that country six months ago.

"Oil won't be coming out of there immediately, but it'll be sooner than a lot of people think," Lynch says.

The dollar rose Thursday as the euro and other currencies fell on worries about the health of European banks and the broader regional economy. A stronger dollar pushes down oil prices because oil is priced in dollars and becomes less attractive to investors with foreign currency as the dollar rises.

In other Nymex trading for September contracts, heating oil lost 8.68 cents, or 2.9 percent, to finish at $2.8748 per gallon and gasoline futures dropped 8.71 cents, or 3 percent, to $2.7832 per gallon. Natural gas lost 4.1 cents to end the day at $3.892 per 1,000 cubic feet.
