Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

The drought already is negatively affecting ethanol and food processors in the region. Goss said many ethanol plants either have closed temporarily or reduced operations because of the higher corn prices that come with the drought.

The business leaders surveyed were quite pessimistic about the economy for the next six months. The confidence index plummeted to 38 in July from June's 56.7.

Hiring has slowed in the region, and Goss said he expects jobs numbers to decline in the months ahead. The survey's employment index declined to 51.1 in July from June's relatively strong 61.8.

The prices-paid index, which tracks the cost of raw materials, remained unchanged in confidence in U.S. financial markets, experts say.

This is a black eye," said Sal Arnuk, cofounder of Themis Trading and co-author of "Broken Markets." "The plumbing in the system is faulty and is wreaking havoc on investors' confidence."

The problems began when dozens of stocks started moving up and down by wide margins for no apparent reason. Abercrombie & Fitch jumped 9 percent within minutes, hitting $36.75 after closing the night before at $33.80. Harley-Davidson suddenly fell 12 percent, to $37.84 from $43.23. Wizzard Software shot up above $14 after closing the night before at $3.50, according to data compiled by FactSet.

The culprit was Knight Capital Group. Knight, which takes stock trading orders from big investors and routes them to exchanges, said in a statement that a "technology issue" had occurred that affected the routing of about 140 stocks to the New York Stock Exchange. Later in the day, NYSE said

July at 51.1.

The July inventory index dropped to 45.7 from June's 53.9. Goss said that suggests businesses were reducing inventory because they anticipate slower production in the months ahead.

The export reading fell to 45.2 in July, which is its lowest level since August 2009. That's down from June's already weak 48.4 export reading. And the import index declined to 46.5 in July from June's 51.5.

"Weaker global growth and the rising value of the dollar making U.S. goods less competitive abroad pushed the export reading lower," Goss said. "At the same time, slower regional growth restrained the demand for imported supplies and materials. I expect trade numbers to weaken even more in the months ahead."

The other components of July's overall index were:

• New orders fell to 44 from June's 57.3. • Production or sales dropped to 46.7 in July from 56.7 the month before.

• And delivery lead time declined to 55.9 from June's 56.2.

it was canceling faulty trades in six smaller stocks, including Wizzard.

Knight told its clients to send their orders away from its system and said it was reviewing the issue. The episode was an embarrassment for Knight's CEO Thomas Joyce, who was one of the biggest critics of the Nasdaq stock market for the way it handled Facebook's initial public offering.

Knight's own stock plunged $3.39, or 33 percent, to $6.94 on Wednesday. The trading problems served as a reminder of other miscues that have shaken investors' faith in recent months:

• Facebook's highly anticipated first day of trading on May 18 was thrown into chaos because of computer glitches at Nasdaq. The opening was delayed by half an hour. Many investors couldn't buy shares in the morning.

sell them later in the day, or even know whether their orders went through. Nasdaq is preparing to pay as much as $62 million to firms that were hurt from the glitch.

 In March, an electronic stock exchange called BATS Global Markets Inc. had to cancel its own initial public offering after a series of technical snafus prevented its stock from ever opening for trading. The CEO of the Kansas City-based company, Joe Ratterman, gave up his role as chairman and issued a public apology.
