Kolberg-Pioneer Honored As Patriotic Employer

Kolberg-Pioneer, Inc., of Yankton has been recognized as a "Patriotic Employer" for its support of employee participation in America's National Guard and Reserve

The company, along with Traffic Manager Todd Rothenberger, was honored for its contributions to America's national security and protection of liberty and freedom by the South Dakota Employer Support of the Guard & Reserve (ESGR) organization. Rothenberger and Kolberg-Pioneer, Inc. (KPI-JCI) were nominated by Matthew Schmidt, an equipment operator in the company's yard department who is supervised by when you are down a man at work," Schmidt said. "Todd is really understanding of what I do. It makes me feel good to know that if I get deployed or have to be gone for an extended period of time, I'm going to be able to come back and my job is still going to be there. To have that kind of job security is amazing.

This is the second time Kolberg-Pioneer, Inc. (KPI-JCI) has been recognized as a Patriotic Employer by the South Dakota ESGR. The company employs 60 men and women who have served or are currently serving in the military. The ESGR is a Department of Defense organization that was established in 1972 to promote cooperation and understanding between Reserve component members and their civilian employers. Rothenberger said the company has a "tried-and-true" past employment history with members of the National Guard, both in South Dakota and surrounding states. In addition to being appreciative of their service to the country, Rothenberger also recognizes the · Lightened by more than 5,000 pounds of lead ballast, Endeavor II, T. O M. Sopwith's challenger for the America's cup, faced today her third sailing engagement with Harold S. Vanderbilt's twice victorious Ranger, which continued an overwhelming favorite to retain the trophy in four straight races. • Boat owners, who had their craft tied up at the river front Monday night, had considerable salvaging to do yesterday as the result of the wind which accompanied the storm of that night. Every one of the small craft on the river front was sunk at their moorings early in the storm and motors on power craft have had to be dried out, cleaned and more or less overhauled as the result of the submersion in the muddy water.

there are many steamboat wrecks in the Missouri National Recreational River. Work noted that there were hundreds of wrecks during the 19th century on the river and the remains can contain many artifacts including the wreck itself, freight and passengers' personal items. Work said that other parks across the country are dealing with the same problems.

He said that Civil War artifacts at sites like Gettysburg suffer from resource removal. He added that fossils have been taken from Badlands National Park and artifacts have been taken from Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado.

Work noted that people have even attempted to steal elk antlers and a mule deer fawn at Yellowstone National Park a few years ago, but were luckily caught.

He made the startling example of Fossil Cycad National Monument in South Dakota. There were a large number of fossilized cycads found near the Hot Springs in the Black "Children in the future could grow up caring less about history and the environment without cultural resources," he added. "We want the resources to last, but they can't last if they're not here."

Work said there are several ways for citizens to help preserve cultural resources.

He said that when patrons visit national parks and use the resources there, you should leave the artifacts there and not take or damage it. In addition, if someone is disturbing a resource, Work encourages you to tell them to stop or call the Park Rangers on duty.

"We want to create a better understanding of the resources and how to preserve them," he said. "This will help us get the word out more.

Wilkinson noted that officials do not think the drought is playing a factor in the stealing of cultural resources on the river this season.
