Shooting

lor Green to the gathering outside a supermarket and was wounded in the attack, said nothing would return her life to what it was before the shooting.

"This is so sad —a 23-year-old who's going to spend the rest of his life in a box. I feel empty. What I want, I can't have," she said, adding that she was relieved the case ended. Still, "it's like a Band-Aid that keeps getting ripped off."

Experts had concluded that Loughner suffers from schizophrenia, and officials at a federal prison have forcibly medicated him with psychotropic drugs for more than a year.

Court-appointed psychologist Christina Pietz testified for an hour about how she believes Loughner became competent. Loughner listened calmly without expression. His arms were crossed over his stomach, lurched slightly forward and looking straight at Pietz.

A plea agreement offers something for both sides, said Quin Denvir, a California defense attorney who has worked with Loughner attorney Judy Clarke on the case against unabomber Ted Kaczynski.

Prosecutors would avoid a potentially lengthy and costly trial and appeal, knowing that the defendant will be locked up for life.

Clarke managed to avoid the death penalty for other high-profile clients such as Kaczynski and Eric Rudolph, who bombed abortion clinics in the late 1990s and Atlanta's Olympic park in 1996.

The decision to spare Loughner a federal death sentence makes sense, said Dale Baich, a federal public defender in Phoenix who handles capital case appeals and isn't involved in the case.

"As time went on and there were numerous evaluations, I think everybody had a better understanding of Mr. Loughner's mental illness," Baich said. He added: "It appears that he will need to be treated for the rest of his life in order to remain competent."

Water

system can still produce approximately 5 1/2 million gallons per day.

But demand for water this year is well above normal due to the drought and has regularly surpassed 6 million gallons per day.

"What our concern is, if we don't get some restrictions in place or lessen demand, (the storage in our two water towers) starts to come down. Pretty soon, you only have half of your storage, and a water main break or a large fire could tax that immediately. We're trying to be careful."

Viereck said high demand had nothing to do with the equipment failure, as it would be operating anyway.

The situation means that the original water treatment plant, built in 1917, must now run 24 hours a day.

"Its last update was in the early 1980s," Viereck cautioned. "We're pushing our luck. But it's also why we're going through a facilities plan on what we think we need to do for the future (of the water treatment system)."

It's not the first problem with the water treatment system that had to be overcome this year. The city also faced challenges with a surface water intake in the Missouri River that had become covered by a sandbar. As a result, its capacity was severely limited. In response, a temporary intake was erected.

Viereck said the city will send out an update when the temporary restrictions can be lifted.
