nine years and so when you're in business for yourself, you don't always get a pat on the back unless it's from your family or friends," she said. "So the accolades that come outside of my family and friends are really nice."
She added that judges go through all of the art tents and vote on a variety of different categories to determine the best in show winners each year.
"I love Yankton Area Arts, and each year they come up to us and tell us we're in the running (for best in show), and this year we finally won it so it's really exciting," Scott said.
Scott, who is from Valley Springs, travels throughout the area to sell her items, with about 50 percent of her business coming from the Minneapolis-area, but she travels nearly every weekend to the five-state area.
"Sales at Riverboat Days this year have been fabulous," she added. "We met our sales goal at 3 p.m. Saturday which is amazing."
The other best in show winner was Pat Gerlach photography, who won in the fine artist category.

Captain and Belle for this years Riverboat Days were Dave and Brenda Spencer.
"It's been an honor and a nice recognition," Dave said. "We're proud to represent Yankton in the big festival we have here all summer long."
He added that he is looking forward to whoever will be captain and belle for next year so they can enjoy it as much as he and his wife have.
"It's fun to see people down here (at Riverboat Days) that we know," Brenda said. "It's been a great honor to go around here and see people from other communities and how much they look forward to Riverboat Days as well."
The Spencers were notified that they were this years Captain and Belle in April.
"We were overwhelmed and honored when we found out we were selected," Brenda said.
Dave added that he was humbled when he found out about the honor because there have been a lot of great people who have previously been captain and belle, and there are a lot of deserving people in Yankton.
"It's been a fantastic turnout this year," Oliver said. "It's been at, or above, previous years turnouts and both bands that headlined on Friday and Saturday night drew great crowds."

Oliver added that a lot of the vendors have done nothing but thank board members for the hospitality the city of Yankton has provided for them.
"Vendors have said this is one of the best shows they come to," he said. "It makes everyone feel like we accomplished something after we've worked hard on this for the past 12 months."
The winners during Saturday's parade were:
Vehicles:
• Robert Nissen
• Duke Ellingson
• Main Street Bridal and Great Tuxes
Commercial:
• Vishay Dale Electronics
• Future Look Salon
• Rupiper Travel and Tours
Non-Profit:
• Yankton Community Library
• Sacred Heart School

from the front to the back of the building due to safety issues. Since the change was made, parents now have been able to pick up their children in front of the school, which has been a much safer location.
Tony Anderson, YSD bus supervisor and mechanic, has also made sure buses have been ready to go for students in the new school year.
In the summer Anderson services all buses for YSD, and the Department of Transportation (DOT) conducts its own independent inspections as well.
"They have a sheet and check over the buses from top to bottom," Anderson said. "They can fail a bus based on a number of different categories."
Also in the summer, Anderson washes all buses and makes sure they meet the state and federal safety standards for school buses. He also often times hires new bus drivers for the school year.
"All of our bus drivers must be CDL (Commercial Drivers License) tested and passed," he said. "They also need to have a P & S (passenger and school bus) endorsement."
In addition, all bus drivers in the district must pass physicals from their doctors. Drivers must also get their physicals taken every year or two after being hired.

However, before the drivers are hired, YSD conducts extensive background checks on potential employees and runs drivers' fingerprints through the system to make sure they have clean backgrounds.
Anderson also ensures bus safety by having comprehensive training for drivers every few years. South Dakota mandates four hours of bus driver training every five years, but its up to each district to determine if they want to have more training than that.
"Bus driver training can involve anything from written tests, driving tests or videos in the classroom," he said. "We have also had obstacle courses for drivers to drive their buses through to make sure they are driving safely."
Another form of training Anderson goes through with drivers is using a fire extinguisher, in case that should be needed in a potential bus emergency. He also takes the drivers through training on First Aid kits and how to properly use all of the equipment found inside the kits.
"There are a lot of things we do here for training our bus drivers," he said. "We really teach them and go over things we feel we need to touch ground on."
