These "eyes" were placed in a tree by the G.A.R. Hall Gallery in Yankton this week to promote the upcoming Summer Arts Festival during Riverboat Days.

YAA: 'Have Eyes For The Arts'

To kick off its 2013 Summer Arts Festival in conjunction with the upcoming Riverboat Days Celebration, Yankton Area Arts (YAA) has taken its art-advocating message to the treetops, calling all to "Have Eyes for the

As a part of its mission to educate, advocate, and enrich Yankton, Yankton Area Arts has intentionally endeavored to integrate the arts within the community through public art projects. Specifically, the goal of the YAA Public Art Committee is to maintain a positive creative presence in the Yankton community by undertaking projects that engage people outside the walls of galleries, museums, theaters, and performance spaces to promote the idea that art is for everyone.

Last year, YAA successfully presented a short-term interactive display entitled "Before I Die." Positioned at the Meridian Bridge's entrance, the "Before I Die" wall offered community members and visitors a place to pause, reflect, and write for all to see their life goals and

This year, YAA is presenting its Have Eyes for the Arts shortterm display to pique interest and energy for the 2013 Summer

Arts Festival and cause people in the community to pause and look at things with fresh perspective. YAA has chosen to do this in the form of nature personification-specifically, seven pairs of eyes placed in strategically chosen trees on the following properties around the community: G.A.R. Hall, First Dakota National Bank (north branch), The Depot Building/Mannes Architects, The Kelly Inn, Morgen Square, The Landing, and Sacred Heart Monastery.
"Have Eyes for the Arts is a thought prompt, if you will, hopefully causing people to see things around them with new interest and intrigue-and ultimately proclaim of Yankton that art happens here!" said Jackie Quinn, YAA executive director.

The eyes were designed by YAA Community Art Committee Chair and local architect Sarah Mannes-Homstad and her husband Gregg Homstad, approved by the Yankton Community Development Department, and installed by Klein's Tree Service.

To take the message further, Have Eyes for the Arts apparel will be available for purchase at Summer Arts Festival and thereafter at the G.A.R. Hall Art
