Want to hear some rock 'n roll? You've got it. Rather listen to country? No problem. Is folk music your favorite? They can play that, too.

Whatever sound you're looking for, this year's headlining music act for Riverboat Days has it covered.

The Troubadour Retrievers, a band consisting of a rotating lineup of professional Kansas City musicians, will perform tonight (Friday) at 8 p.m. on the main stage at Riverside Park. Admission is free.

"... we play everything from country to classic rock to '80s hair metal to jazz. We play the whole gamut of music to try to cater to everybody in every demographic."

CRAIG SUMMY

and Jeff Daniels.

McBee has performed with numerous bands, including The McFadden Brothers, Kim Park and Bloodstone, and currently fronts Special Forces, a .38 Special tribute band. He plays guitar, bass and drums.

"He also plays with one of Kansas City's longtime jazz icons, Ida McBeth," Summy said. "He's a very talented musician."

Miller and Daniels both perform with the Brandon Miller Band. Miller plays guitar and bass while Daniels plays drums and percussion.

"They're a blues act and a phenomenal band," Summy said.

While this is the first performance for this specific lineup of the group, Summy said it isn't difficult to form a cohesive band with rotating personnel, thanks

"We play a variety of everything," said Craig Summy, who will be the lead vocalist for the group performing in Yankton. "That's the affectionous thing about the project we do is that we play everything from country to classic rock to '80s hair metal to jazz. We play the whole gamut of music to try to cater to everybody in every demographic."

Summy, who plays in the Kansas City cover band The Shanks, is one of four musicians who will take the stage tonight. He will be joined by Scotty McBee, Brandon Miller
