SD Retirement System Assets Soar

PIERRE (AP) - The South Dakota Retirement System's assets have grown to a record high after earning 19.5 percent on investments in the past year.

Managers say the Retirement System's assets exceeded $9 billion at the end of the last fiscal year on June 30.

Retirement System director Rob Wylie says preliminary calculations indicate the system is fully funded so its assets exceed all future potential benefits to be paid to retirees in state and local government agencies. That means retirees should get the maximum 3.1 percent cost of living increase next July

State Investment Council Chairman Hugh Bartels, of Watertown, says final numbers are not compiled yet. But he says the South Dakota Retirement System's investment return is expected to be tops in the nation among similar state pension plans.

Officers were dispatched to the scene just after 7 a.m. Monday. A resident of the home noticed what looked like a pile of clothes just outside a garage but soon discovered the body of Curtis Bradford.

The Omaha man's death is being investigated as a homi-cide. No arrests have been reported.

Vandals Strike Tribal Campus in RC

RAPID CITY (AP) — Vandals struck the Rapid City campus of United Tribes Technical College over the weekend, three days after the Bismarck, N.D.-based school held a grand opening celebration for its Black Hills Learning Center

The vandals targeted doors and windows early Saturday and caused as much as $75,000 in damage, according to property owner Hani Shafai. Police were investigating but did not immediately identify any suspects.

A $5,000 reward is being offered for information that leads to an arrest, said Shafai, who is president of Dream Design International.

"Our community cannot tolerate this kind of activity," he said

The school is housed in the former National American University building. Officials with United Tribes Technical College, which is run by the five American Indian tribes in North Dakota, said the branch in the Black Hills of western South Dakota could provide much-needed skilled labor for the Bakken oil fields in western North Dakota.

Shafai said he hopes the completion of a street construction project near the campus will provide more access and better lighting to help deter future acts of vandalism, while bolstering safety for the college's students and faculty.

Classes at the school are scheduled to begin Aug. 26.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — A 29-year-old man has died and another man was arrested after a crash south of Grand Island

The Hall County Sheriff's Department says the crash hap-pened about 2 p.m. Monday on Highway 281 when 30-year-old Hermino Alamilla lost control of his car. The car entered a ditch and rolled several times before coming to rest.

The car was then hit by a pickup driven by 26-year-old Megan Brodrick, of Grand Island. She wasn't hurt.

A passenger in the car died after being ejected during the crash. The sheriff's department says the man was from Grand Island but didn't immediately release his name. Another passenger, 23-year-old Jose Coronado, wasn't injured.

Alamilla was taken to a hospital for non-life threatening injures. He was charged with driving under the influence and felony motor vehicle homicide.

Neb. Corn Development Still Lagging

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Cooler than normal weather across much of Nebraska and dry conditions are hampering the development of the corn crop. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says in Monday's weekly report that warmer temperatures are needed in many areas to advance crop maturity.

The condition of dry land corn is rated at 45 percent good or excellent, compared with the 59 percent average.

Irrigated corn conditions stand at 79 percent good or excellent, compared with75 percent average.

South Dakota Capitol Window Work Begins

BY BOB MERCER State Capitol Bureau

PIERRE — The $2.7 million renovation of the state Capitol's 199 panels of antique stained glass began Monday, as the first pieces were carefully lifted from the beautiful center dome and lowered one at a time in a special protective crate to the rotunda floor 96 feet below.

The project will encompass much more than the rotunda, however. It is scheduled to take about 14 months and be completed by Oct. 1, 2014.

The target is that everything is back in place and looking as good as new or better for the 125th anniversary of statehood on Nov.2, 2014.

Conrad Schmitt Studios from New Berlin, Wisconsin, is leading the project. All of the glass will be transported to the studios near Milwaukee to be cleaned and repaired as necessary, while the soft lead frames will be replaced with stronger ones less likely to sag.

The glass has been in place since 1909 and there aren't any records regarding the firm that did the original work or how it was done, according to Mike Mueller, an official for the state Bureau of Administration.

Mueller and state Commissioner of Administration Paul Kinsman briefed the Legislature's Executive Board about the project Monday.

Kinsman said a goal is to install a new lighting system that will better show the glasswork. The old lighting system burned out and wasn't replaced.

The first half of the work will focus on the rotunda glass. The second half of the project will start after the 2014 session of the Legislature concludes March 31. Altogether there are 4,400 square feet of stained glass to be removed, redone and reinstalled.

Workers began removing panels of stained glass from the Capitol rotunda Monday as part of a 14-month, $2.7 million project that will also remove, clean and renovate the stained glass in the roofs of the House and Senate chambers and the third-floor barrel over the grand staircase. Contractors are using a cradle and winch system for the rotunda panels. The box is winched from the second floor to the inside dome, where each panels is lifted from its support frame, placed in the box and sent down. One panel is moved per trip. The rebuilding of the panels will take place at a Milwaukee, Wis.-area specialty firm.

the work involves the stained glass ceilings of the House and Senate chambers on the third floor, as well as the barrel vault above part of the Capitol's third floor above the grand staircase.

Colored panels of special plywood will be installed temporarily in each opening while the glass panels are out. All of the legislators' 105 be removed from the two chambers for up to six months next year while the work is performed on the House and Senate ceilings, according to Jim Fry, director for the Legislative Research Council.

Fry said a replacement plan for worn carpet in the House and Senate chambers will be put on hold until after the ceiling work is done.

Scaffolding will be installed for the House and Senate work, while a temporary floor will be constructed above the grand staircase to perform the barrel vault work. The dome panels in the rotunda are being transported by a winch and rope system, because the panels can be lifted out by workers on the hidden walkway between the inner glass structure and the actual outer dome

Work is proceeding mean-while on refurbishing the historic bathrooms on the third floor and restoring chairs and couches in the legislative lobbies.

New desks are being obtained for six major legislative offices and new modular furniture will be installed for administrative staff in those offices.

The last time there was a major campaign to make the stained glass look better came in the late 1980s as state government prepared for the 1989 centennial of statehood.

Mueller said there wasn't any consideration that the glass be permanently removed this time and simply replaced with painted plywood. "That was just never an option," he told the legislators Monday.
