company, said Thursday he wanted to arrive in Yankton early enough to prepare himself and his equipment for next week's 5-day tournament.

"It's great to be able to practice here before everything starts," Symmonds said.

The weather can be a rather big factor, he added — pointing out later that Yankton is significantly warmer and more humid than Wales.

"Bows can perform differently at different places," Symmonds said. "It can depend on the weather."

Getting to Yankton was an adjustment in itself, he added.

Symmonds' travel took 20 hours, flying from London to Minneapolis to Sioux Falls, then an hour and a half drive down to Yankton.

He said the last time he shot in the United States was 2004, when he competed in an international event in New York.

Still early in his stay in Yankton, Symmonds complimented the new NFAA ranges.

"It's very civilized and organized from what I'm used to," he said, with a smile.

Former State Director Impressed

Ron West has experienced plenty of NFAA Outdoor National Championships since 1978. He has, in fact, been to every event over the past 36 years.

West, the former NFAA state director in Maryland for 12 years, recalled Thursday a time when similar outdoor target or field events were held in other locations across Yankton — including the trails at the Gavins Point Recreation Area.

"When the NFAA got this land, that changed everything," West said, pointing to the Easton Yankton Archery Complex.

West said he was one of the state officers who helped the NFAA secure the move of its national headquarters to Yankton in 2008.

"For (president) Bruce (Cull) to secure this area, and for the city to invest what they have, this is simply outstanding," West said. His impression of the new field ranges? "They are absolutely fantastic," West said.
