ON THIS DATE

75 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, August 2, 1939

-Labor Day should be well celebrated in Yankton this year for on that day, Monday, September 4, the Loyal Order of the Moose will be ending a three-day state convention and the committee in charge of arrangements for celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of South Dakota statehood will be holding the old-settlers celebration and picnic at Foerster park.

-The Congregational church of Yankton is in annual recess for the month of August. Sunday school children and workers in all departments will enjoy a month vacation. This has been a practice in this church for 25 years or more, the pastor Rev. H.H. Lindeman stated, and affords lay workers as well as the minister a short rest from the routine work of the organization.

-A boating accident at Lewis & Clark Lake on Sunday afternoon luckily ended with no injuries. Don Schiedel of the Yankton Coast Guard Auxiliary said the 17-foot boat was pulling waterskiers on the lake near the Midway Unit at about 4 p.m. There were seven people in the boat, four of whom were sitting in the open bow section, when the driver cut the throttle. The front of the boat then went under the water and the boat rolled over on its side.

-Staci Kaye Ellis, Yankton, was crowned 1989 Miss Midwest Teen in pageant ceremonies July 22 at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge in Sioux Falls.

opment of the hemp industry," Crawford said. "Nebraska and other states can only go so far before we bump into federal restrictions."

Senators and Gov. Dave Heineman approved a law this year that will let the University of Nebraska grow industrial hemp for research purposes. The law was passed in response to this year's federal Farm Bill, which allowed for hemp production at universities and agriculture departments in states that consent. Nebraska is one of a dozen states that have approved industrial hemp legislation.

Sen. Norm Wallman of Cortland, who sponsored the Nebraska law, said hemp can serve as a good rotational crop that uses relatively little water and needs no pesticides to grow.

"I believe there's a market for this product, and I'd like to see Nebraska jump in at the beginning — not be a follower," said Wallman, a farmer. "This can be a real win-win situation."

During debate this year, a few senators questioned whether the crop could open the door to legalizing marijuana or make it easier to secretly grow the drug. Wallman said the two are different, and growing hemp next to marijuana would ruin a marijuana crop. The plants would cross-pollinate, reducing the amount of THC in the marijuana.

The Nebraska Department of Agriculture is working with the university to develop detailed rules and regulations for the experiments, said Bobbie Kriz-Wickham, the department's assistant director. Kriz-Wickham said the regulations have to be in place within a year of the law taking effect.

Once the rules are in place, University of Nebraska researchers will import hemp seeds from abroad for research in a greenhouse, said Jason Feldman, who leads the Nebraska chapter of the Hemp Industries Association.

Feldman said the work could answer questions about the best times to grow hemp in Nebraska, ideal soil conditions and other factors that might help farmers.

"The more focus we have on this, the sooner we can create a variety that suitable for our climate, the sooner we can have a crop in the ground that's amazing," he said.

Shakespeare Exhibition To Open At USD

VERMILLION — The University Libraries at the University of South Dakota are hosting "And There's the Humor of It": Shakespeare and the Four Humors, a National Library of Medicine (NLM) traveling exhibit Tuesday, Aug. 5, through Saturday, Sept. 13.

The exhibit, consisting of six free-standing banners, is on display on the second floor in the I.D. Weeks library building on the USD campus. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

The four humors date back to the ancient Greeks who theorized that an individual's health and temperament rely on the balance of four major body fluids: blood (sanguine), phlegm (phlegmatic), black bile (melancholic), and yellow bile (choleric). An excess of one humor would affect the individual's personality. This exhibit explores the role played by the four humors in several of William Shakespeare's plays through imagery and rare books from the National Library of Medicine, National Institutes of Health and the Folger Shakespeare Library.

For more information about "And There's the Humor of It": Shakespeare and the Four Humors at the University Libraries, contact Danielle Loftus, Art and Exhibits Committee, (605) 677-5123, email dloftus@usd.edu. For library hours, see www.usd.edu/library/hours.cfm/.
