tattoos on his arms, but that's my baby."

Johnson added: "We all need to thank the Browns for Michael. Because Michael's going to make it better for our sons to be better black men."

The Rev. Al Sharpton told the rally Brown's death was a "defining moment for this country."

Sharpton said he wants Congress to stop programs that provide military-style weaponry to police departments. He said he expects police to "smear" the slain teenager, his family and his attorneys. He also condemned the recent violence and looting in Ferguson.

The protests have been going on since Brown's death heightened racial tensions between the predominantly black community and the mostly white Ferguson Police Department, leading to several run-ins between police and protesters and prompting Missouri's governor to put the state highway patrol in charge of security.

Ferguson police waited six days to publicly reveal the name of the officer and documents alleging Brown robbed a convenience store shortly before he was killed. Police Chief Thomas Jackson said the officer did not know Brown was a robbery suspect when he encountered him walking in the street with a friend.

Gov. Jay Nixon, who imposed the curfew after declaring a state of emergency, said Sunday on ABC's "This Week" that he was not aware the police were going to release surveillance video from the store where Brown is alleged to have stolen a $49 box of cigars.

"It's appeared to cast aspersions on a young man that was gunned down in the street. It made emotions raw," Nixon said.

Police have said little about the encounter between Brown and the officer, except to say that it involved a scuffle in which the officer was injured and Brown was shot. Witnesses say the teenager had his hands in the air as the officer fired multiple rounds.

"When you're exhausted, when you're out of resources, when you're out of ammunition, you surrender," Brown's uncle, pastor Charles Ewing, told worshippers during a Sunday sermon at Jennings Mason Temple in Ferguson. "He surrendered and yet he died."

The officer who shot Brown has been identified as Darren Wilson, a six-year police veteran who had no previous complaints against him. Wilson has been on paid administrative leave since the shooting, and the department has refused to say anything about his whereabouts. Associated Press reporters have been unable to contact him at any addresses or phone numbers listed under that name in the St. Louis area.

Earlier in the day, about 150 people gathered in St. Louis to show support for Wilson. The crowd protested outside a TV station because it had broadcast from in front of the officer's home.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said the station, KSDK, later apologized. Other in the group, composed mostly of police and relatives of officers, carried signs urging people to wait for all the facts.

But you also have to leave room for dessert, because Lindsey's strawberry puffs are delicious and huge.

Lindsey Enterprise's strawberry puffs are made from a huge layered puff pastry cut in half. They are filled with vanilla Bavarian cream filling and fresh strawberries iced with sweet sauce. The cooks then sandwich the fillings and top it off with strawberries and a mountain of whipped cream. The dessert itself could fill up two people.

"We have so many people that come here every year just for the strawberry puffs," Lindsey said. "It makes us really happy."

With such a successful turn out and Lindsey Enterprises love for Riverboat

Days, this food vendor will be sure to be back to satisfy the peoples taste buds next year.

"I have to really give kudos to the people that make this even possible," Lindsey said. "They have had the perfect equation for a successful event every year. We are so honored to be here. We will be back."

MARK LEVSEN

Levsen started as a full-time artist four years ago but has been woodcarving for 18 years. He wood-carves Christian art, landscapes and wildlife out of sun-bleached cottonwood. On many of his art pieces he carves in bible verses.

"I love the Lord. He is the inspiration for my work," Levsen said. "It is very meaningful to me."

This was Levsen's fourth time at YAA's Summer Arts Festival.

His inspiring handmade woodcarvings out of naturally fallen wood impressed the judges, landing him his first Best In Show award.

"This means a lot to me. I am very happy," Levsen said. He said he hopes his work will move people and bring a small measure of beauty into the world, and glorify God.

"I am very thankful to the Lord for blessing me with a good pair of hands," Levsen said. "I can't take credit for the words."

Levsen resides in Webster and said he plans to come back for next year's event.

Iraq

Baghdad have hindered the supply of arms to the force, leaving them overstretched and outgunned as the Islamic State group advanced. Earlier this month, the militants swooped into Kurdish-held territory, seizing a border crossing and the Mosul dam. They also took control of villages around a northern mountain chain dominated by the Yazidis — adherents of an ancient faith seen as heretical by the militants.

The militants also took over villages near Irbil inhabited by Christians, and two Kurdish towns, Makhmour and Gweir.

Those seizures led to the flight of tens of thousands of Yazidis, Christians and Kurds into safer, Kurdish-held areas, and threatened to march onto Irbil itself.

Their advance was halted by U.S. airstrikes, the first American military involvement in Iraq since its troops pulled out in 2011. U.S. officials also said they would begin supplying weapons to Kurdish forces and said they had already been giving them some automatic rifles and ammunition.

But peshmerga forces say they haven't yet received any new supplies, and it's not clear how long the U.S. airstrikes will continue.

The senior commander said officers of his rank were told the U.S. had delivered mounted machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades to the Kurdish Defense Ministry, but they had not been distributed.

He said the weapons, while powerful, could not stop the advance of the Islamic State group, which has used heavily armored U.S. Humvees taken from Iraqi troops who abandoned them in June when the militants first swept through the territory.

Echoing a complaint by other commanders, he said the peshmerga lacked the firepower to pierce Humvee armor, adding that they needed to be closer than 330 feet (100 meters) from the vehicle with an RPG in order to destroy it. He said the weapons mounted on Humvees typically allowed militants to stay back 1,300 feet (400 meters).
