8+3 NOTICE OF SOLID WASTE APPLICATION AND RECOMMENDATION By The Department of Environment and Natural Resources

The South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) has received a permit renewal application from the city of Irene to continue operation of a Type IV yard waste compost solid waste facility located 1/2 mile north of Irene.

DENR has reviewed the application and information submitted, has reached a tentative decision and recommends to the Board of Minerals and Environment (board) that the permit be reissued to the applicant to continue operation of the solid waste facility.

The recommendation for renewal of this permit is subject to the applicants compliance with the Administrative Rules of South Dakota (ARSD) 74:27 and a total of 29 permit conditions.

In accordance with SDCL 34A-6-1.14, DENRs recommendation for approval will become the final decision of the permit application and this permit will be reissued 30 days after publication of this notice.

A copy of all recommended terms and conditions are available from DENR and may be obtained upon request from: South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Waste Management Program, 523 East Capitol Avenue, Pierre, South Dakota 57501-3182.

preservation, they're going to want to try to keep this mellowed out and not have a problem ...

"(Sturgis) wasn't the typical place we was going to solve our problems at," Matter said.

Law enforcement would likely know about planned violence at Sturgis because biker gangs frequently have members "on the hook" to police who provide information, according to Steve Cook, executive director of the Midwest Outlaw Motorcycle Gang Investigators Association.

Biker gang violence can be localized and spurred by turf wars, but it's also unpredictable, state DCI Director Bryan Gortmaker and other law enforcement officials said. In 2006, two men affiliated with the Hells Angels shot and wounded five people connected to the Outlaws Motorcycle Club in Custer State Park, about 70 miles from the rally.

voters in 38 of Nebraska's 93 counties.

Peterson said petition circulators have worked at county fairs, concerts, parades, rodeos, ice cream socials and sporting events, and set up tables outside of courthouses and other government buildings.

"Last weekend we had volunteers at a county fair, and they got nowhere," he said. "Then they went to a fair in a neighboring county and did great."

State Sen. Mike Groene of North Platte, a volunteer with Nebraskans for the Death Penalty, said circulators in Lincoln County have already gathered signatures from about 12 percent of the county's registered voters.

Groene said the group is seeking more to account for members were stabbed.

On a recent morning, Randy White and JR Miller sat in lawn chairs under a tarp at the Sturgis Swap Meet, where there's an open view of the street. They said bikers typically get pulled over for small infractions — "Tail lights, loud pipes," Miller explained.

"Most people are just up here to have fun and get away from their jobs for a week," White said. "If you're looking for trouble, I guess you can find trouble, but I think it's going to be minimal."

Just weeks after Waco, roughly 300,000 people attended New Hampshire's Laconia Motorcycle Week. Authorities also had no specific indication from intelligence reports that there would be spillover violence, and the rally was quiet, Laconia police Chief Chris Adams said.

Bill Moelter, a Sturgis lifer, said he loves the rally because it's a chance to meet new people and have old friends visit. Perched on a Yamaha Virago in his driveway, the 43-year-old said he anticipates there will be routine violence, but he said police will be able to stamp it out quickly.

"We haven't locked our doors in 10 years," Moelter said.

signatures that are declared invalid, and to demonstrate strong support in favor of letting voters decide the issue. Groene said he has circulated petitions in seven western Nebraska counties, and plans to travel to Chase and Dundy counties in mid-August.

"People run to us when they see us," he said. "We want to send a strong message."

Death penalty opponents said they have sent observers to petition sites to watch for fraud and ensure that circulators are following state law. They also will campaign against the death penalty if the issue is approved for the ballot, said Danielle Conrad, who is leading the Nebraskans for Public Safety campaign against the referendum.

"Our campaign has received an incredible positive outpouring of support from conservative leaders, faith groups, victims' families and traditional death penalty opponents that allows us to prepare a strong and competitive effort for a general election campaign if needed," said Conrad, a former state senator and current executive director of the ACLU of Nebraska.
