

Yankton County Places High At State Horse Show

Youth from across the state came together in Huron for the 2015 South Dakota State Horse Show on July 20 through July 23.

This year, four judges were helping to sort through the competitors to find the Champions in various Divisions.

These were Tina Langness, Dawn Taylor, Walter Schaefer and Gene Carr.

All of which brought a wealth of judging experience to this year's show.

Yankton County 4-H members placed well at the show. Results were:

- Senior Ashley Heine: western showmanship-red.
- Senior Tanner Schiferl: hunt seat-blue, hunter equitation over fences-purple-grand champion.

- Junior Savanna Larson: barrel racing-white, pole bending-blue, reining-white.

Passion Is The Fashion At 4-H Achievement Days

Communication is a large part of 4-H. Members learn how to improve their communication skills in a variety of ways, both verbal and non verbal.

The 4-H Fashion Revue contest helps youth develop an understanding of personal presentation in public situations with regard to clothing, accessories and grooming. This understanding can help youth learn to better control their non verbal communication.

On Friday, July 10, Yankton County 4-H members came together for the local Fashion Revue Contest.

They planned, selected and constructed clothing that was becoming and expressive of their individual personality.

In Fashion Revue youth can model clothing they have made and constructed, or they can model clothing they have purchased.

Constructed outfits are judged on how they fit and their quality of construction, among other things.

Selected, or purchased outfits, are judged in a similar manner. However, youth also have to share how much they paid for their outfit.

Good buymanship is a skill youth learn through Fashion Revue. When purchasing an outfit for Fashion

Revue, youth consider how often they can wear the items, if the material will shrink or fade, and how much they are paying.

Judges rank youth based on their buymanship. They will even calculate the cost per wearing. The judge takes the total cost and divides it by the estimated number of times the 4-H members is thinking he/she will wear the outfit.

There are several goals and objectives youth are trying to reach in Fashion Revue. Youth work to gain poise in public situations through good posture, ease of movement and confidence in one's personal appearance.

Youth also try to describe how a garment is cared for and how a garment fits into a wardrobe plan.

Finally, youth learn to understand how fabrics, clothing styles and accessories enhance their own physical features or traits.
