very well," Steffen said.

The Grand Island location is about the same distance from Hartington as was Lincoln, with many Cedar County 4-Hers and families continuing their State Fair tradition, Steffen said.

The Grand Island fairgrounds include modern and easily accessible facilities, Steffen said. In addition, its central Nebraska location attracts visitors from parts of the state who may not have previously attended in Lincoln, Steffen said.

"With the exhibits, they give you maps of the facilities, and it's laid out really nice," she said. "It's very eye catching and easy to get around."

$\label{eq:headed for the state fair} \mbox{HEADED FOR THE STATE FAIR}$

Unlike South Dakota, Nebraska's purple ribbon winners at the county level don't automatically qualify for the state fair, Steffen said. The judges designate which entries are considered eligible for state competition.

The Cedar County Fair attracted around 2,100 entries this year, Steffen said. Of that number, Cedar County qualified 45 entrants with 135 static exhibits (the figure doesn't include animal exhibits).

In addition, Nebraska
4-Hers can take home their State Fair-qualifying entries and make changes using the county judges' recommendations before returning the entry for the State Fair. The Nebraska 4-Hers can also submit new entries for items such as baked goods or horticulture.

horticulture.
While some counties
have reserved their own booths, Cedar County joins the majority whose exhibits are spread across the fairgrounds and grouped into project areas.

South Dakota and Nebraska also differ in the schedule and amount of time that most 4-Hers spend at the State Fair. A number of South Dakota 4-Hers, especially those with livestock exhibits, spend the entire week at the fair. The Nebraska 4-Hers and their families tend to compete on one of the two weekends, bringing down and taking home their livestock on that weekend.

While Nebraska 4-Hers may spend mostly one weekend at the State Fair, Steffen will spend a great deal of time in Grand Island – and on the road. She serves as superintendent for the State Fair's companion animal show and holds other duties, which means she will commute between Hartington and Grand Island during the fair. Other staff members will keep the Cedar County Extension office running as usual.

With most South Dakota schools starting before Labor Day, the 4-Hers keep up with their school work and activities during State Fair week, Siebrandt said.

"(Students) are expected to still do their homework and turn it in on time," she said. "Most of the schools are very accommodating in working with students who go to State

While many Nebraska State Fair competitions are held on the weekends, the facilities don't stand empty during the week, Steffen said. Students from Grand Island and nearby schools attend events such as Ag Literacy Day where they learn about agriculture. Other events include the Largest Classroom Day.

"There is an amazing number of schools at the State Fair with their students," she said.

Because of the avian flu, both South Dakota and Nebraska banned live poultry entries at county and state fairs. However, both states wanted to give 4-Hers an opportunity to compete and allowed them to show photos and talk about their poultry's features.

"We were a little bummed by the poultry (situation)," Steffen said. "We've been working to increase those numbers, and last year we had done some renovations to the small animal building. We had businesses provide grants, and we added new cages for the rabbits and poultry."

The Yankton County
4-Hers still did well in improvising for the poultry division, adding she hopes the live poultry exhibits can return next year.

TEACHABLE MOMENTS

While their states may conduct state fairs differently, South Dakota and Nebraska remain committed to the same 4-H ideals.

Steffen pointed to the wide variety of project areas.

"When people think of 4-H, they think of cooking and livestock. They have really changed the focus so there is more STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math)," she said. "There is a lot more science. in 4-H with rocketry and areas like that. We have about 150 different projects. It's not just for farmers."

Siebrandt agreed, noting 4-Hers can tailor projects to their interests, including robotics.

"The youth really get into honing their skills in areas they enjoy and like to do. We had a girl who really liked to raise and show dogs, so she did it for Achievement Days," she said.

"We tell the families, if there's something they like, they'll find it in 4-H. It's anything and everything."
