Economy Better; Job Growth Weak

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Factories are producing more. Construction is growing. People are buying more cars. The holiday shopping season is off to a strong start.

Normally, all that would suggest a bright outlook for the economy. Problem is, employers still aren't hiring much, the number of people seeking unemployment benefits remains high and Europe's debt crisis poses a grave threat to the future.

Thursday's mixed economic picture came a day before the government will report on unemployment and job growth for November. That report is expected to show a modest net gain of 125,000 jobs, scarcely enough to keep up with population growth. The unemployment rate is projected to remain 9 percent.

Analysts say the economy remains locked in a good-but-hardly-good-enough position: It's growing consistently, yet too weakly to induce employers to hire aggressively.

"The economy is picking up momentum as we close out 2011," said Neil Dutta, an economist at Bank of America Merrill Lynch. At the same time, it faces "an ongoing flu in Europe" and other challenges, such as uncertainty about future taxes and spending in the United States, Dutta said.

For now, factories are expanding. The Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing managers, says its manufacturing index rose to 52.7 in November, up from 50.8 in October. Any reading above 50 indicates expansion. Factories have grown for 28 straight months.

Manufacturers are slightly more hopeful about the next few months because of cheaper raw materials and healthy demand, said Bradley Holcomb, head of the ISM's survey committee.

Still, he said, companies have tempered their outlook because of concerns about whether the economy will grow consistently, uncertainty about federal taxes and regulation and fear that Europe's debt crisis may trigger a global economic panic.

Mark Vitner, an economist at Wells Fargo, suggested that employers are reluctant to hire freely because the U.S. economy's future appears hazy.

For one thing, a Social Security tax cut that provided an average $1,000 in extra cash this year for about 160 million Americans could expire at year's end. Republican lawmakers did take steps Thursday to extend the cut, along with emergency unemployment benefits. But it's still uncertain whether the money will be renewed.

In addition, the Obama administration's health care reform could slow hiring next year, Vitner said, because it will require companies to provide coverage by 2013 or pay a fine.

And any worsening of Europe's financial crisis could cause U.S. and European banks to cut back on lending and hoard cash. That would slow the economy.

Concerns about a credit crunch led the Federal Reserve and five other central banks to take coordinated action this week to lower the cost of dollar loans in Europe and elsewhere.

Vitner said he thinks employers want to see stronger customer demand and economic growth before they step up hiring — rather than hire in anticipation of it.

That could turn into a vicious circle. Without more jobs and higher incomes, consumers won't spend more. Yet without more spending, companies won't increase their payrolls.

Vitner expects growth to pick up to 3.1 percent in the current October-December quarter, but then fall back to about 2 percent in 2012. A recession in Europe could cut up to 0.4 percentage point off next year's growth, he said.

The manufacturing survey also showed that new orders and production rose to a seven-month high, but a measure of employment fell as factory hiring slowed from the previous month.

"Manufacturers are trying to meet demand without significantly increasing their workforce," said Ryan Wang, an economist at HSBC Securities.

Oil Price Lower Ahead Of Jobs Report

BY CHRIS KAHN
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK — Oil prices ended slightly lower Thursday after a four-day surge, as traders await a key U.S. jobs report.

Benchmark crude fell 16 cents to finish at $100.20 per barrel in New York. Brent crude lost $1.27 to end the day at $108.71 in London.

Prices had risen every trading day since Thanksgiving. They were boosted by tension over Iran's nuclear program, strong retail sales in the U.S. and an effort by the Federal Reserve and central banks of other nations to increase the flow of dollars to foreign banks.

Now traders are awaiting the November unemployment report, which will be released by the Labor Department on Friday. High unemployment has been a drag on the economy and has cut into energy demand. Wholesale gasoline demand in November was at the lowest level in more than seven years.

"Everything's on hold right now," PFGBest analyst and oil trader Phil

Flynn said. "We're a little worried about what those jobs numbers will be tomorrow."

Government data released Thursday suggested that the U.S. jobs market remains weak. The number of people who applied for unemployment benefits rose above 400,000 last week for the first time in a month, the Labor Department said. Applications would need to fall below 375,000 for an extended period to cut into the nation's 9 percent unemployment rate. Other reports gave a better reading on the economy. Manufacturing activity in the U.S. rose in November to a seven-month high. Auto makers including Chrysler, General Motors and Ford reported big increases in sales last month. And builders spent more in October on homes, offices and shopping centers, though construction spending remains anemic compared with previous years.

Meanwhile, concerns about Iran continued to simmer. German authorities said Thursday they're investigating reports that Iran has been planning attacks on American targets in Germany. Iran was sharply criticized by Western nations this week after radical students attacked the British embassy in Teheran on Tuesday. They were protesting possible sanctions against Iran because of its nuclear program.

Iran is the world's third-largest oil exporter. Most of its crude goes to Asia. An embargo by European countries would likely have little impact and is viewed as unlikely by analysts.

At the pump, retail gasoline prices slipped by less than a penny to $3.292 per gallon, according to AAA, Wright Express and Oil Price Information Service. A gallon of regular is about 69 cents cheaper than it was at its peak this year, near $4 per gallon, but it's still almost 43 cents higher than at the same time last year.

In other energy trading, natural gas prices jumped 9.8 cents, or 2.8 percent, to end at $3.648 per 1,000 cubic feet, after the government reported an unexpected decline in U.S. supplies last week.

Heating oil fell by 5.56 cents to end at $2.9695 per gallon, and gasoline futures were virtually unchanged, finishing the day at $2.5579 per gallon.
