something Kim Jong Un, as his successor, putting him in high-ranking posts.

Even with a successor, there had been some fear among North Korean observers of a behind-the-scenes power struggle or nuclear instability upon the elder Kim's death.

Few firm facts are available when it comes to North Korea, one of the most isolated countries in the world.

North Korean legend has it that Kim was born on Mount Paekdu, one of Korea's most cherished sites, in 1942, a birth heralded in the heavens by a pair of rainbows and a brilliant new star. Soviet records, however, indicate he Japan, from a base in Russia, emerged as a communist leader after returning to Korea in 1945 after Japan was defeated in World War II.

With the peninsula divided between the Soviet-administered north and the U.S.administered south, Kim rose to power as North Korea's first leader in 1948 while Syngman Rhee became South Korea's first president.

The North invaded the South in 1950, sparking a war that would last three years, kill millions of civilians and leave the peninsula divided by a Demilitarized Zone that today remains one of the world's most heavily fortified.

In the North, Kim Il Sung meshed Stalinist ideology with a cult of personality that encompassed him and his son. Their portraits hang in every building in North Korea and on the lapels of every dutiful North Korean.

Kim Jong II took over after his father died in 1994, eventually taking the posts of chairman of the National Defense Commission, commander of the Korean People's time House Republicans stop playing politics and get the job done for the American people.

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi said by opposing the Senate bill, "Tea party House Republicans are walking away once again, showing their extremism and clearly demonstrating that they never intended to give the middle class a tax cut," said House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

Adam Jentleson, spokesman for Sen-ate Majority Leader Harry Reid, said the Nevada Democrat would be "happy to continue negotiating a yearlong extension as soon as the House passes the Senate's short-term, bipartisan compromise to make sure middle-class families will not be hit by a thousand-dollar tax hike on January 1."

Army and head of the ruling Worker's Party while his father remained as North Korea's "eternal president.'

He faithfully carried out his father's policy of "military first," devoting much of the country's scarce resources to its troops even as his people suffered from a prolonged famine — and built the world's fifth-largest military.

Kim also sought to build up the country's nuclear arms arsenal, which culminated in North Korea's first nuclear test explosion, an underground blast conducted in 2006. Another test came in 2009.

Alarmed, regional leaders negotiated a disarmament-for-aid pact that the North signed in 2007 and began implementing later that year.

However, the process continues to be stalled, even as diplomats work to restart negotiations.

North Korea, long hampered by sanctions and unable to feed its own people, is desperate for aid. Flooding in the 1990s that destroyed the largely mountainous country's arable land left millions hungry.

Keeping this year's 2 percentage point payroll tax cut in effect through 2012 would produce $1,000 in savings for a family earning $50,000 a year. The two-month version would be worth about $170 for the same household.

On Saturday, the Senate voted 89-10 for its legislation, which was negotiated by Senate Republican and Democratic leaders and backed by solid majorities of senators from both parties. It would provide a two-month extension of the payroll tax cuts and jobless benefits and prevent scheduled 27 percent cuts to doctors' Medicare reimbursements during that period, reductions that could convince physicians to stop treating elderly patients covered by the program.

year's 4.2 percent payroll tax reverts to its normal 6.2 percent. "They should pass the two month extension now to avoid a devastating tax hike from hitting the middle class in just 13 days," said Dan Pfeiffer, the White House communications director. "It's

Noem said in preparation for her keynote speech that morning, she reviewed several commencement speeches on the internet made through the years by politicians, business leaders and other noteworthy personalities.

"I didn't want to make today's speech too sappy or too optimistic," she said. "I think you are a unique generation. You don't know of a world without the internet. If you wanted to know something or question something your professor told you over the years, all you had to do is Google it. This makes you much more perceptive ... you can tell a fake when you see it — you know when a deal is just too good to be true.

"So I wanted to leave you with something today that you could use going forward," Noem added. "If I stood up here today and told you the rest of your lives were going to be lollipops and bubblegum, you wouldn't believe me. You know that there are going to be challenges ahead."

She chose to share a portion of the message that comedian and late-night talk show host Conan O'Brien left with the spring 2011 graduates of Dartmouth College.

"So, at the age of 47, after 25 years of obsessively pursuing my dream, that dream changed. For decades, in show business, the ultimate goal of every comedian was to host 'The Tonight Show.' It was the Holy Grail, and like many people I thought that achieving that goal would define me as successful. But that is not true. No specific job or career goal defines me, and it should not define you. Noem said, quoting O'Brien. " ...whether you fear it or not, disappointment will come. The beauty is that through disappointment you can gain clarity, and with clarity comes conviction and true originality. And there is no greater cliché in a commencement address than 'follow your dream.'

Noem said O'Brien's speech also contained this message: "I am here to tell you that whatever you think your dream is now, it will probably change. And that's OK. Your path at 22 will not necessarily be your path at 32 or 42. One's dream is constantly evolving, rising and falling, changing course. It is our failure to become our perceived ideal that ultimately defines us and makes us unique. It's not easy, but if you accept your misfortune and handle it right, you're perceived failure can become a catalyst for profound re-invention.

Those are pretty wise words for a stand-up comedian," Noem said.

She added this advice: "We've all heard the cliché that the only thing that is constant is change. Well, it's a cliché because it really is true. I know all of you have future plans, naturally," she said, "... but don't be surprised if they change. There's no telling where our plans will take us, and where our future will take us."

understand exactly what the subjects mean. Whether it's physiology or anatomy or physics, we know how it applies to what these individuals are doing in the operating room."

Lupien said he is also proud of the way the nurse anesthesia program reflects the mission of MMC.

"Mount Marty talks about awareness of God, hospitality, community and lifelong learning. We try to emphasize that with our stu-dents," he said. "The current first-year students, for example, adopted a family for Christmas and gave them gifts. And the class that's in the second year was very involved with St. Baldrick's Day, which is a children's cancer fundraiser in Šioux Falls.

"With a lot of other programs, people just come in and focus on their schoolwork, and they leave pretty generically. But I'm very pleased with how the students buy into what Mount Marty is all about."

Saturday's commencement address was delivered by Šister Mary Arthur Schramm, OSB, Ph.D. Schramm served as the head of the MMC anesthesia program from 1965-1969 and from 1971-1993.
