rules on the law in June. States that miss a June 29 deadline also risk losing millions in federal aid to help set up the exchanges.

"It's an expensive decision no matter what you do," Flood said. "It's got to be made very carefully, and it's going to take input from a lot of people in this state."

The exchanges are meant to offer a one-stop shop for Americans to buy health insurance. They must be federally certified by January 2013, operational by 2014 and self-sustaining by 2015. The Nebraska Department of Insurance has predicted that a family with two children that makes $55,125 per year could pay an estimated $370 per month because of the income caps and subsidies.

Plan Aims To Put More Doctors In S.D. Small Towns

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Officials hope a plan to boost the annual state medical school budget more than $1 million will attract more doctors in rural South Dakota.

Gov. Dennis Daugaard proposed the additional money this month. The Argus Leader reports that the Legislature is slated to look at the request in January.

"I see this as an important step forward," said Dr. Rodney Parry, retiring dean of the Sanford School of Medicine of the University of South Dakota.

Parry said two changes would result. An incoming class at the medical school now has slots for 52 students a year for the MD program. That number would increase to 56. The school also would set up a rural track as a training option to immerse participating students in small-town culture. The changes could take effect in 2013.

The medical school budget is about $40 million year, said Julie Kriech, director of finance for health affairs at USD. Tuition and fees cover much of that, but $10.7 million comes from the general fund that lawmakers control. Daugaard's request would push that close to $12 million.

Prospective doctors in South Dakota now earn a four-year bachelor's degree, then study four years in medical school before what's usually at least three more years in residency and fellowship programs.

Strip Clubs Welcome Oil Workers To North Dakota Boom Town

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) —In the oil boom town of Williston, the city's welcome mat includes a pair of strip clubs adjacent to the Amtrak train depot.

Most cities work to enhance their entry points as a matter of public pride and to market the communities to potential businesses. But first impressions matter little in Williston, where the economy is exploding and jobs outnumber takers.

Whispers Nightclub and Heartbreakers Gentleman's Club are sore-thumb standouts on the first block of the city's Main Street and are kitty-corner from the chamber of commerce headquarters and the downtown senior center.

Mayor Ward Koeser says he doesn't like the image the strip club's portray. "To be blunt and honest, I simply don't like them," Koeser said of the bars. "I'm disappointed in the image they portray to the city. I wish they were not located in town, period."

Whispers owner Grace Delling and Heartbreakers owner Jared Holbrook did not return telephone calls from The Associated Press or messages left for them at the businesses.

The dimly lit clubs featuring a rotation of topless dancers appeal to many among the throngs of men seeking their fortune in Williston, but some community leaders consider the businesses unmentionable.

"No comment," said Kevin Paschke, executive director of the Williston Chamber of Commerce. "I don't want to talk about it or get in the middle of it."

Whispers, the long-established strip club, also offers casino-style blackjack and pull-tab tickets. Little-known around town is that half of the gambling proceeds go to Williston State College, a two-year school with about 415 full-time students.

"I'm not going to make a moral judgment on these businesses," said Williston State College president Raymond Nadolny, who says the revenue helps fund scholarships, facilities and a fledgling hockey program.

"If we didn't have this kind of fiscal resource, we wouldn't be able to do these projects," he said.

Police Investigate Fatal Shooting In Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — An investigation into an early morning shooting in Omaha that left one man dead is continuing.

According to KETV, police were called to the apartment complex around 12:30 a.m. Monday.

Police say the victim, identified as 37-year-old Darrell Taylor, of Omaha, was found beneath a black SUV at the scene. He was pronounced dead at the scene from an apparent gunshot wound.

Witnesses described hearing three loud pops then a minute of quiet followed by more gunshots.

No arrests have been made.

S.D. Cities Set Records For Warm Weather

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The National Weather Service says the cities of Sioux Falls and Mitchell set record highs on Monday.

Meteorologist Mike Buss says the temperature in Sioux Falls reached 54 on Monday, eclipsing the previous record of 54 set in 1959.

Buss says Mitchell was even balmer. He says the city hit 56 on Monday, besting the previous record of 55 set in 1956.

Omaha Police Search For Robbery Suspect

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Police in Omaha say they are looking for a man who fled with an undetermined amount of money after robbing a bank.

According to KETV, the man walked into a First National Bank branch around 9 a.m. Monday, showed a gun and demanded cash.

Police say he fled in a white Chevrolet Impala with a spoiler on the back.

They say the a dye pack exploded during the robbery and the suspect may have dye stains on his clothes or body.

Police say the man should be considered armed and dangerous.

McGovern Says He's Feeling Better After Fall

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. George McGovern says he's "feeling in better shape every day" more than three weeks after falling and hitting his head in his home state of South Dakota.

The 89-year-old former Democratic presidential candidate tells The St. Augustine Record that he's planning to return to his home in northeast Florida in January.

McGovern fell Dec. 2 outside a Dakota Wesleyan University library bearing his name, where he was scheduled for a television interview. He told the newspaper on Friday that he's going to be fine and that many Democratic officials in South Dakota have been visiting him as he recovers.

McGovern lost the 1972 presidential race to Republican Richard Nixon. He also spent three terms in the Senate.

He's had a home in St. Augustine since 2008.

Dakota St. Seeking Money For Tech Building

MADISON (AP) — Dakota State University is hoping the South Dakota Legislature will approve spending $10 million for a new campus information systems building.

University President Doug Knowlton says the building would allow the Madison school to showcase its high-tech programs and facilities.

Knowlton tells the Madison Daily Leader that the equipment is now housed in East Hall, which was built in the late 19th century.

South Dakota's Board of Regents included the project in a $204 million package of building projects that will be presented to the Legislature next month.
