PENNIES FOR PATIENTS

The Webster School Student Council recently held a coin drive for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society's Pennies for Patients program. The school raised $927 to donate to this worthy cause and to help in its fight to find a cure for leukemia and other blood cancers.

Davison Co. Beef Show Hosts Beef Skill-a-Thon

BROOKINGS — The Davison County Winter Beef Show will host the second annual Beef Skill-a-thon on Dec. 27, running from 4-6:30 p.m. Youth interested in learning more within the beef project are encouraged to participate in this free event held at the Davison County 4-H Fairgrounds, 3200 West Havens Ave. Mitchell. No pre-entry is required.

The Beef Skill-a-thon will test and showcase youth's hands-on knowledge of beef production by having them demonstrate basic cattle handling practices. Youth will complete four stations ranging from (but not limited to) breeding and selection, carcass evaluation, reproduction and animal health.

Top Beef Skill-a-thon scores will be recognized from three age groups following 4-H rules for beginners, juniors, and seniors. Prizes sponsored by local Ag Business will be awarded during the No Fit Showmanship Jackpot Contest that evening.

For more information about the Beef Skill-a-thon, contact Megan Nielson, SDSU Extension Youth Livestock Field Specialist, (megan.nielson@sdstate.edu) or the Davison County Extension Office for Davison County Winter Beef Show information (davison@sdstate.edu).

The Center To Host New Year's Eve Party

The Center, 900 Whiting Drive, Yankton, will host a New Year's Eve Party on Monday, Dec. 31, running from 7-10 p.m.

There will be live entertainment featuring The Bumble Bees. Beer and wine will also be available for sale.

For more information, contact Christy Hauer at 605-665-4685 or director@thecenteryankton.org.

School Meal Standards Are Set To Add More Grains And Proteins

BROOKINGS — The U.S. Department of Agriculture announced recently that it will be lifting the previously imposed limits on how much protein and grains could be served to students in one week.

The latest modifications will be set in place for the rest of the 2012-2013 school year, explains Ann Schwader, SDSU Extension Nutrition Field Specialist.

"These changes are positive and show that the USDA is willing to work with nutrition officials and others who have concerns related to the new standards," Schwader said.

The original changes to the school lunch standards were announced January 2012, due to the national Healthy, Hunger Free Kids Act (Public Law 111-296) that determined how much of certain food groups could be served, set limits on calories and salt and phased in whole grains.

Schwader says the move to create stricter guidelines was motivated by the fact that the obesity rates among school children are growing and steps were needed to reverse the trend.

"These guidelines aligned school meals with the latest nutrition science, based on recommendations of nutrition experts and the 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans nutrition recommendations," she said. The new school meal patterns meet specific calorie ranges for children in grades K-5 (650 calories), 6-8 (700 calories), and 9-12 (850 calories).

"The intention of the new school lunch guidelines is to ensure that almost all children receive at least one-third of their daily nutritional and energy needs," Schwader said.

The latest modifications are being provided to allow schools more weekly planning options to ensure that children receive a nutritious meal every day of the week. According to the revisions, the students can eat as many grains and proteins as they want, as long as they are eating the allotted amount of calories put forth by the USDA.

SDSU Extension recommends that parents assist their children with the changes to the school lunch standards.

"Parents can make sure their youth eats a nutritious breakfast and encourage them to take and eat the fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean proteins and low-fat milk offered in school meals," she said.

Parents and organizations can contact SDSU Extension Nutrition Field Staff about the new school lunch standards and the modifications. For additional information, contact your SDSU Extension Regional Center. Contact information can be found at www.iGrow.org.
