Towns, Townships Meeting Set For Huron

HURON — "Basic Training" is the theme for the South Dakota Association of Towns and Townships annual meeting Dec. 4-5 at the Crossroads Hotel and Convention Center in Huron.

Local government officials (towns, townships, and county officials) will have an opportunity to garner information to assist all of them in their responsibilities as local elected officials.

The event will begin with reporting for duty at our "Annual Road Show" at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 4, with training by the SD Local Transportation Assistance Program (SDLTAP) on "Basics of Road Maintenance." This presentation will identify which roads are critical access roads vs collector roads and field access roads, determine the levels of maintenance, and learning more about the "how's" of approving township road systems. Also included in the Road Show will be the topics of "Culvert and Bridge Inspections," "Road Stabilization and Dust Control," "Bid Letting and Contracts/Performance Bonds" and "Updates on Traffic Sign Requirements."

Thursday morning begins with an "Overview of the County Site Analysis Program" by the SD Department of Agriculture and Councils of Governments; followed by a presentation and discussion on "What's My Job?" for Township Officials," by Jay Leibel, Legal Counsel for the SD Association of Towns and Townships; after which a workshop will launch into "Understanding Your Township Risks and Liabilities," by the EMC Claims Department.

The Boot Camp exercises will conclude with two breakout sessions that will run concurrently:

- "Updates of the Open Meeting Laws" by Jay Leibel
- "Opting out and Special Assessments by Colleen Skinner, S.D. Dept. of Revenue"

The event will be closing with the adoption of policies and resolutions for the organization.

More information can be obtained by calling the office of the South Dakota Association of Towns and Townships at 605-353-1439 or registering online at www.sdtownships.com.

Royal Neighbors Party At Pizza Ranch

The Royal Neighbors is sponsoring a Christmas Party at Pizza Ranch, 15th and Broadway in Yankton, on Wednesday, Dec. 4, running from 5-7 p.m.

Pick up your tickets before you order. There will be information provided about the Women's Shelter.

Bach's Lunch Series Opens Thursday

The Bach's Lunch mini-concert series will again take place at Yankton's Trinity Lutheran Church, Fifth and Broadway, throughout December. The lunches will begin each time at 11:45 a.m. The concerts will start at 12:15 p.m.

The first concert will be held in the Old Sanctuary on Dec. 5, titled "We All Sing Christmas" with music of Advent and Christmas led by the Rev. Anna Peck.

The second concert will take place in the same location on Dec. 12, titled "The Pipe Organ Sings" with music by Sister Mariel Kang.

The third and last concert will be held in the New Sanctuary, titled "Voices of Christmas" by Jessica and Kenneth Tice.

Yankton College Open House Friday

Newly acquired historical items from the Joseph Ward family will be on display during the Yankton College Holiday Open House, set for Friday, Dec. 6, from 1-3 p.m.

Alumni and friends are invited to stop by the Yankton College office at 1801 Summit, Door No. 9, for refreshments and see dinner-ware, never-before-seen family photographs and other memorabilia belonging to Ward, who founded Yankton College in 1881. Greyhound fans can also find apparel and other merchandise on sale for holiday gift giving at the YC office.

For more information, call (605) 665-3661.

LCTC Seeking New Board Members

The Lewis and Clark Theatre Company (LCTC) will be electing several new members to its board of directors at its January 2014 meeting.

The board of directors for the theatre company has the following openings: 2 three-year positions; 2 two-year positions; and 2 one-year positions.

LCTC is looking for board members who believe in its mission and are willing to be active in their roles. The current board members are all volunteers, and they are made up of community leaders, business leaders and general citizens. Their work and dedication is a year-round commitment to the Lewis and Clark Theatre Company.

The LCTC board meets once a month, with additional meetings for committees as needed. Responsibilities of board members include assisting the managing director in operating the theatre as a 501 c(4) non-profit corporation, assist in the year-round planning needed to produce its seasons, assist in the management of the Dakota Theatre, grant writing for a non-profit corporation, attracting and retaining sponsors, fundraising, planning the productions and events, community outreach and promotion of theatre events.

Members of the community who would like to support LCTC are encouraged to apply. Deadline for letters of interest is Dec. 31. Letters of interest can be mailed to 328 Walnut Street, Yankton, S.D. 57078 or emailed to lctc@midconetwork.com/. Questions can be directed to Managing Director Shauna Marlette at 605-665-1298.

proaching it, Weener said. Authorities did not yet know how fast the train was traveling but had found a data recorder, he said.

One passenger, Frank Tatulli, told WABC-TV that the train appeared to be going "a lot faster" than usual as it approached the sharp curve near the Spuyten Duyvil station.

Nearby residents awoke to a building-shaking boom. Angel Gonzalez was in bed in his high-rise apartment overlooking the rail curve when he heard the roar.

"I thought it was a plane that crashed," he said.

Mike Gallo heard the same noise as he was walking his dog. He looked down at the tracks, saw injured people climbing out of the train and "knew it was a tragedy right away."

Within minutes, dozens of emergency crews arrived and carried passengers away on stretchers, some wearing neck braces. Others, bloodied and scratched, held ice packs to their heads.

The MTA identified the victims Sunday as Donna L. Smith, 54, of Newburgh; James G. Lovell, 58, of Cold Spring; James M. Ferrari, 59, of Montrose; and Ahn Kisook, 35, of Queens.

Three of the dead were found outside the train, and one was found inside, authorities said. Autopsies were scheduled for Monday, said the New York City medical examiner's office.

Eleven of the injured were believed to be critically wounded and another six seriously hurt, according to the Fire Department. After visiting an area hospital Sunday evening, New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg told reporters that the 11 who originally were critical no longer appear to have life-threatening injuries.

To Cuomo, the scene "looked like a toy train set that was mangled by some super-powerful force," the governor said in a phone interview with CNN.

As deadly as the derailment was, the toll could have been far greater had it happened on a weekday, or had the lead car plunged into the water instead of nearing it. The train was about half-full at the time of the crash, rail officials said.

"On a workday, fully occupied, it would have been a tremendous disaster," New York City Fire Commissioner Salvatore Joseph Cassano told reporters at the scene. The affected line, called the Hudson line, carries about 18,000 people on an average weekday morning.

For decades, the NTSB has been urging railroads to install technology that can stop derailling caused by excessive speed, along with other problems.

A rail-safety law passed by Congress in 2008 gave commuter and freight railroads until the end of 2015 to install the systems, known as positive train control. Aimed at preventing human error — the cause of about 40 percent of train accidents — it can also prevent trains from colliding, entering tracks undergoing maintenance or going the wrong way because of a switching mistake.

But the systems are expensive and complicated. Railroads are trying to push back the installation deadline another five to seven years.

Metro-North is in the process of installing the technology. It now has what's called an "automatic train control" signal system, which automatically applies the brakes if an engineer fails to respond to an alert that indicates the speed is excessive.

wear a T-shirt, different attire may be worn, she said.

Despite the leeway given for certain situations, YHS junior Mahri Jones said she knows it will be a challenge to complete the full 30 days.

"I've always been really insecure about what people think about me, so I'm a little scared," she said. "But I'm excited about it and also excited to talk about my faith through this. This is going to help me open up about it."

The campaign also will be used to assist with the youth ministries' annual efforts to raise funds for missions around the world.

Through the end of the "my1shirt" cause on Dec. 23, students will be taking pledges for the Convoy of Hope. The faith-based non-profit provides global help to people in need through feeding initiatives, community outreaches and disaster response. It also works to provide clean water, to teach community leaders agricultural techniques and to provide educational opportunities.

"It's really amazing for me to think that a small town in South Dakota can affect some place across the world," said Bon Homme High School senior Taylor Ahrens.

Roux added that she is proud of the students for taking on such an endeavor.

"It's not often that teenagers choose something that's inconvenient," she said. "They're sacrificing something to help other people, and I think that's amazing for people their age to do."
