My Heisman Ballot: Watson, Henry, McCaffrey

BY JAMES D. CIMBUREK
James.cimburek@yankton.net

One of my fellow Heisman voters, John Hoover of the Tulsa World, referred to this year as the "one of his toughest ever" in terms of voting. I can't say that I disagree. While the three finalists – Derrick Henry of Alabama, Christian McCaffrey of Stanford and DeShaun Watson of Clemson – were all on my ballot, their order was a challenge. I also pondered by Oklahoma quarterback Baker Mayfield and Navy quarterback Keenan Reynolds.

My final ballot: Watson, Henry, McCaffrey.

It was not an easy decision by any means. I typically sit down with my partner in sports, Jeremy Hoeck, to discuss the decision. And, while we agreed in the top three, it was a challenge deciding on the order that they should appear on the ballot.

I felt Watson was more consistent, his win over Notre Dame notwithstanding. He completed nearly 70 percent of his passes and rushed for nearly 900 yards as well.

Henry was a solid choice as well, rushing for nearly 2,000 yards and 23 touchdowns, breaking Herschel Walker's SEC rushing record.

McCaffrey was a record-setter as well, shattering Barry Sanders' all-purpose yards mark with nearly 3,500 yards.

Reynolds has been a record-setter as well, as one of the top running quarterbacks ever. He, Mayfield or LSU's Leonard Fournette all had seasons that could have been Heisman-worthy in some seasons.

With any vote as close as this one was, it's not surprising that there has been some backlash about the decision. Personally, I think any of the top three would have made a deserving Heisman.
