Walk This Way

Sculptures Fall Into Place As RiverWalk Project Nears Reality

Beginning this May, downtown Yankton will have some new visitors. Yankton RiverWalk, Inc., a nonprofit group, has commissioned 10 sculptures for its inaugural year of placing outdoor art installations along Second and Third streets in Yankton's Historic Downtown District, as well as in Riverside Park.

"This project has been in the works for about five years now," said Lisa Scheve, a RiverWalk committee member. "It's very exciting to know we're at this point. The core of this committee is a group of young professionals. I think it's been a great learning process for us." The 10 sculptures were chosen by a jury based on artistic quality, interpretation of the river culture and visual appeal. Durability and safety for outdoor placement was also taken into account.

■ "We have pieces that we know have been successful in other sculpture walks. We also have pieces that are being created with Yankton in mind. It was nice to know that some of the artists that submitted proposals researched Yankton, researched the river and put their thoughts into the work."

The 2010 RiverWalk artists are Lee Leuning and Sherri Treeby of Aberdeen; Lyle Parks of Sioux Falls; Mary Jane Lamberson of Dannebrog, Neb.; Rick Haugen of Sioux Falls; Adam Weiss of Springfield, Neb.; Jake Balcom of Lincoln, Neb.; and Darwin Wolf of Sioux Falls.

More than 15 artists submitted proposals for the 2010 RiverWalk.

"When I went into this, I was hoping to get submissions from South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska to really get a regional flavor," Scheve said. "Maybe in the future, we'll get artists from either of the coasts. But we have really great talent here in the Midwest, and I think this is a great opportunity to showcase them."

Committee member Katie Hunhoff added, "We hope that in the future there will be artists from Yankton that apply."

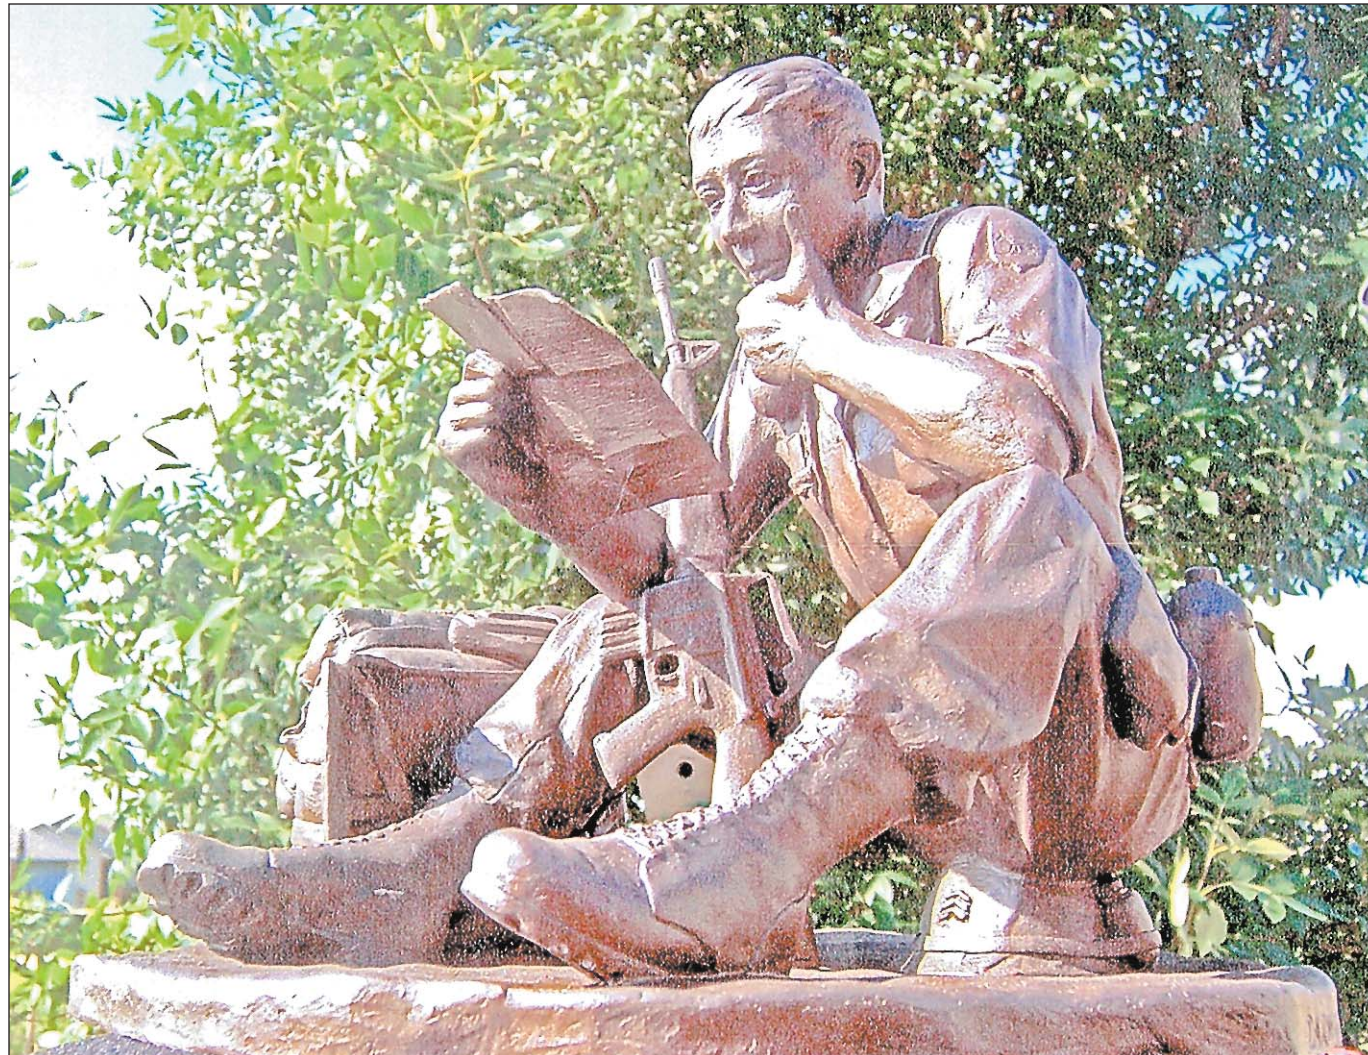

The organization has modeled its efforts after sculpture installations found in other regional cities like Sioux Falls and Rapid City.

This year's sculptures include new works, as well as some that have been used in other installations.

"I think it's a good mixture for the first year," Scheve said. "We have pieces that we know have been successful in other sculpture walks. We also have pieces that are being created with Yankton in mind. It was nice to know that some of the artists that submitted proposals researched Yankton, researched the river and put their thoughts into the work. I think people are going to be very surprised and amazed at the things that are going to be on display for the year."

Installation of the sculptures will begin May 13. Each year, new sculptures will be selected to replace those
