Political Science Students Net Internships

VERMILLION — Several students from the University of South Dakota Department of Political Science are receiving credit and gaining valuable career experience through part-time and full-time internships at the state and federal government levels.

The students are working in various government internships — not just in South Dakota but throughout the world, including Lima, Peru and Washington, D.C. Several students are also working closer to home with internships in state offices at Pierre and Sioux Falls.

Jennifer Gieselman, a political science major from Sioux City, Iowa, is presently interning for the Department of State at the United States Embassy in Lima, Peru, fulfilling a United States Department of State internship. Gieselman is working in the Consular Section, specifically in the American Citizen Services area where Americans traveling abroad seek assistance in the event a passport is lost or stolen, renew a passport, become incarcerated, have a birth or death abroad, or receive Social Security. Her government internship in Peru is 10 weeks.

"One of the projects I am working on now is helping citizens abroad learn how they can vote in the primaries and upcoming general election," said Gieselman, who also interned for Iowa Congressman Steve King two summers ago. "The Consular Section also processes visas, so I have been learning a lot about what it takes to qualify for a visa to the U.S. It is a complicated system, but I enjoy seeing how happy people are when they receive their visa."

Additional internships involving USD students this semester include Gina Mairose of Kimball, Senate Republicans, South Dakota Legislature in Pierre; Deven Scott of Aberdeen, Office of the Governor, State of South Dakota, Pierre; Hanna McElroy of Sioux City, Iowa, Senate Republicans, South Dakota Legislature in Pierre; Madison Warder of Sioux City, Iowa, Senate Republicans, South Dakota Legislature in Pierre; Rebecca Reiter of Florence, House Republicans, South Dakota Legislature in Pierre; Cody Horton of Mitchell, United States Sen. John Thune, R-S.D., Sioux Falls office; Alyssa Hanisch of Sioux Falls, United States Sen. John Thune, R-S.D., Washington, D.C. office; and Dennis J. Smith of Mitchell, United States Sen. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., Sioux Falls office.

SDSU Extension AnswerLine Offers Answers

BROOKINGS — For decades South Dakotans have come to rely on their local extension educator to answer their family and consumer science questions. Today when consumers have questions related to food safety, cleaning tips, or balanced nutrition they have an additional tool they can use to find answers - AnswerLine.

AnswerLine connects consumers with Extension specialists, research-based information and resources.

"This is a one-stop-shop for answers to family and consumer science questions," said Suzanne Stluka, Food & Families Program Director for South Dakota State University Extension.

The service Stluka is referring to is AnswerLine. AnswerLine is a toll-free connection to family and consumer science specialists dedicated to answering questions and directing consumers to research-based resources.

"Through AnswerLine consumers have access to an office full of specialists, along with data and resources compiled by SDSU Extension Specialists, Extension Field Specialists, faculty and researchers," Stluka said.

"We've entered a new era in how we help answer consumer questions," said Stluka, of the service which has filled the void left since October 21, 2011 when local extension educators converted into the role of Field

Specialist, and relocated to eight regional centers throughout the state.

She adds that AnswerLine provides access to services in additional specialty areas of family and consumer sciences.

"AnswerLine will provide consumers with an expanded library of resources," Stluka said.

South Dakotans can begin using AnswerLine immediately.

To learn more visit, iGrow.org and click on the tools dashboard at the bottom of the page, or to call AnswerLine dial 1-888-393-6336.
