Bill Seeks To Quell Sex Trafficking In Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska lawmakers should support a bill calling for a commission to study sex trafficking and increased penalties for pandering, public safety and human welfare officials

Lincoln Sen. Amanda McGill has sponsored the bill, aimed at identifying and getting rid of human trafficking in Nebraska. The Judiciary Committee heard testimony Thursday on the complex

Amy Williams, a legislative aide who represented McGill, told the committee that the state needs to quantify the human trafficking problem in Nebraska. She said anecdotal evidence of illegal activity is plentiful, but solid facts have not been compiled.
The bill would also boost penalties for pandering if the offender has prior convictions or the person being enticed into prostitution is a minor. In addition, the bill requires special training for police, prosecutors, judges and other officials who may encounter prostitutes. It would also allow sex trafficking victims a chance to clear prostitution convictions off their criminal record.

Al Riskowski, executive director of the Nebraska Family Council, a conservative Christian group, said human trafficking isn't new, and that the United States is a destination point for the sex trade.

'Educating police and the public is the most important part," Riskowski said. "They need to know what to look for and what to ask. This bill will establish an important commission to study this problem in Nebraska."

Bankers Survey Index Drops Slightly

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A monthly survey of bankers in 10 Midwest and Great Plains states shows the rural economy slowing down, but reflects strong gains in hiring and farmland prices.

The Rural Mainstreet Index released Thursday dropped slightly from 59.8 last month to 59.6 in February. Anytime the index, which ranges from 1 to 100, is above 50, it suggests the economy will

Creighton University economist Ernie Goss, who oversees the survey, says he expects to see slower growth in farm income as a result of softer agriculture commodity prices and higher overhead

The economic confidence index, which reflects expectations for the economy six months out, rose to 60.3 from January's 56.1.

The survey covers Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wyoming.

S.D. Lawmakers Urge Simpler Votes

PIERRE (AP) — The South Dakota House has endorsed a proposed amendment to the U.S Constitution aimed at helping Congress get things done.

Representatives voted unanimously to pass a resolution asking Congress to propose a change in the constitution that would require each bill passed by the U.S. House and Senate to deal with Supporters say South Dakota is one of 43 states with similar language in their state constitutions. Rep. Jon Hansen of Dell Rapids says such a change would allow Congress to focus on issues on which it agrees, rather than be bogged down trying to pass bills that include many issues that spark disagreement.

The proposal was started by two South Dakotans who hope other states will join in asking Congress to propose the constitutional amendment.

S.D. Marine Killed In Car Crash In California

RAPID CITY (AP) — A Rapid City couple is mourning the loss of their son, who was one of three Camp Pendleton Marines killed in a car crash in California

Jason Chleborad, 22, a 2008 graduate of Rapid City Stevens High School, was killed early Tuesday when the car he was a passenger in went out of control on a Dana Point street and slammed into a tree. Two others in the car were killed and a fourth person was hospitalized in critical condition. Sheriff's investigators said speed, slick roads and alcohol appeared to be factors in the crash.

Parents Brian and Amy Chleborad told the Rapid City Journal that they last saw their son over the Christmas holiday, during a surprise visit. He also visited Rapid City last July after serving a tour of duty in Afghanistan, according to his father.

'He earned the Navy Achievement Medal over there, which is a big deal," Brian Chleborad said.

The parents were joined Wednesday by grieving friends, including members of the high school wrestling team.

"He was probably the kindest person I have ever had the pleasure of knowing," said Tyler Millslagle, who had known Jason Chleborad since first grade. "He was always the kind of person who could sit down and listen to your problems or put a smile on anyone's face."

Blue Cross Protests Decision To Switch Plans

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Nebraska says it will challenge the state's decision to switch health benefit Company spokesman Brian Pickering said Thursday that the state's announced move to United Health Care was based on incomplete information.

Nebraska officials have said the move will save taxpayers and state employees a combined $8 million annually. Pickering said the change will actually cost an additional $10 million per year, due to limits in the United Health Care network.

Department of Administrative Services director Carlos Castillo says the company is allowed to file a formal protest. But he says state officials are confident in the procurement process that was used.

Nebraska has been a Blue Cross/Blue Shield client for at least 30

Measure On Mileage Passes S.D. Senate

PIERRE (AP) — When South Dakota's voters cast their ballots this November, they will decide whether the per-mile compensation given to legislators for their first trip to and last trip from the legislative session in Pierre should increase.

The full Senate passed the proposed amendment 25-7 on Thursday, indicating their support for repealing the constitutional limit on mileage reimbursement that has been in place since 1891. The House passed the resolution last month.

For more than 120 years, legislators have received 5 cents for every mile traveled on the initial trip to the Capitol and the final ride home from the annual session. For all other routine trips to and from Pierre, the 105 members of the Legislature get the state employee rate of 37 cents a mile.

Sen. Todd Schlekeway, R-Sioux Falls, one of the resolution's sponsors, said legislators no longer commute in "horse and buggy days," so the reimbursement should increase.

"We're not driving Henry Ford's Model T to Pierre," he added, describing the constitutional provision as the "most obsolete and archaic. Since there isn't a gubernatorial or congressional race in South Dakota this year, Schlekeway said this state election ballot has space for a measure like this one.

Madison Shooting Suspect Pleads Not Guilty

BY DIRK LAMMERS Associated Press

MADISON (AP) — A lawyer for a 73-yearold Watertown man accused of fatally shooting his long-ago classmate in an incident that might have stemmed from an old grudge entered a not guilty plea and requested a jury trial at a court hearing Thursday. Carl Ericsson is charged with first-degree murder in the Jan. 31 killing of retired Madison High School teacher and track coach Norman Johnson, 72, was shot twice in the face after answering the door at his house in Defense attorney Scott Bratland entered the plea on Ericsson's behalf during a preliminary hearing. He also requested a trial, which Circuit Judge Vince Foley set for July 9. It is expected to last two weeks.

Both Bratland and state's attorney Ken Meyer declined comment after the hearing.

Ericsson's brother, Madison resident Dick Ericsson, said in a court affidavit that his brother suffers from depression and alcoholism and that the two last talked about six months ago. He said his brother was a sports manager at Madison High years ago and that "there was an incident where Norm Johnson did something to Carl.'

"Since that time, over 50 years ago, Carl has held a grudge against Norm Johnson," the affidavit said.

The two had also been students at the school.

Shortly after the shooting, Johnson's wife, Barbara, found him lying on the floor and saw a man walking to a dark sedan parked outside.

A bit later, investigators say, a man matching the suspect's description was spotted trying to enter the home of another retired Madison High School teacher and coach. Officers collected two flashlights and photographed tire and shoe impressions outside of the house. A resident then reported seeing a man a quarter-mile away outside of Dick Ericsson's home, according to an arrest affidavit.

When investigators interviewed Carl Ericsson the day after the shooting at his Watertown home, they reported seeing items that piqued their interest — including two flashlights similar to those seized outside of Larson's house and a Glock handgun. With Ericsson's permission, officers looked at his Ford Taurus and noted that the tire treads appeared consistent with tracks left at two of the Madison homes.

During an interview at the Watertown Police station, Ericsson acknowledged being in Madison that Tuesday and having the handgun with him, but denied remembering Johnson or going to his house, according to the Johnson died of two gunshot wounds to the face, an autopsy determined.

Cities Ask Lawmakers For More Tax Power

BY GRANT SCHULTE

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Top city officials in Nebraska asked lawmakers Thursday for the power to increase sales taxes with voter approval, arguing that the current tax setup favors people who enjoy city services without paying municipal property taxes.

Leaders from Omaha, Lincoln, York and other cities urged the Legislature's Revenue Committee to advance a measure that would give them the option to raise rates to as high as 2 percent. Supporters said it would allow cities to offset property taxes and collect revenue from out-of-town residents who benefit from city roads, businesses and other amenities.

Current state law caps the city sales tax rate at 1.5 percent. Under the bill, at least some of the revenue collected beyond the 1.5 percent would have to go toward partnership projects with a county or school district.

Omaha Sen. Brad Ashford, who declared the measure his priority bill for the session, said the mandatory vote requires cities to win public backing for property tax relief, construction or other projects.

Ashford said his bill seeks to address a statewide problem of cities needing the revenue, but also encourages partnerships with counties and school districts.

The measure seeks to revive an issue that advanced through a first-round vote last year but fell short of a veto-proof majority. Republican Gov. Dave Heineman has said he would veto a bill that could lead to tax increases, and called on cities to trim their budgets.

Unlike the previous measure, Ashford's new bill would impose a 10-year sunset for any tax increases beyond the 1.5 percent, unless the revenue is used to repay bonds for a specific project. At least some of the revenue would have to go toward long-term development projects, in partnership with a county or school district.

Lynn Rex, executive director of the League of Nebraska Municipali-

ties, said 86 of the 194 cities with sales taxes have reached the 1.5 percent maximum. Nebraska has 530 cities

Rex acknowledged that the bill might not help small cities in rural areas that are far from larger metropolitan areas. But "it really does assist those cities that are in a position to be economic drivers for this state," she said.

Omaha Mayor Jim Suttle's chief of staff, Steve Oltmans, said his city is still struggling with $22 million in expenses from last year's Missouri River flooding.

Lincoln Mayor Chris Beutler pointed to cuts that his city has made in library hours, senior center services, and a retirement match for municipal employees. But he said cuts to state aid last year have created pressure to raise property taxes, which hit homeowners but not people who live outside the city's borders.

"From my perspective, as a person running local government, I'd like to have the most flexibility to let the community decide the fairest combination," he said.

Pilot Suspected Of Drinking Kept Off Flight

BY NELSON LAMPE Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — An apparently intoxicated airline pilot was stopped at Omaha's airport on Thursday before boarding a commercial flight line brought in someone else to fly the plane. Frontier Airlines spokeswoman Lindsey Carpenter said in an email that the airline was investigating allegatwo-hour delay while the air-tions that a pilot was impaired and that the flight was delayed "because of concern about the condition of a scheduled crew member" who hadn't reported "Frontier and Chautauqua have a zero-tolerance policy for drugs and alcohol," she said, referring to Chautauqua Airlines, which operates the Omaha service to Milwaukee. She said the airline wouldn't comment in further detail because it was a personnel matter. Flight 1894 was to have taken off at 6 a.m. carrying 29 passengers, three crew and two pilots. The plane, an Embraer 145, landed in Milwaukee around 9:30 a.m.

Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Elizabeth Isham Cory, in Chicago, said Frontier reported the incident to the agency, as required. She declined to provide a copy of the report to The Associated Press, saying the news outlet would have to file a Freedom of Information Act request for it.

It's unclear whether the pilot was drunk, had taken illegal drugs or was impaired by prescription medication. Initial reports from the airport said the pilot appeared drunk.

Carpenter did not immediately respond to a phone call seeking clarification.

PIERRE — In an effort to reduce costs and make voting easier, South Dakota lawmakers are pushing a bill through the House that establishes vote centers as the go-to locations for casting ballots in the state.

The House Local Government Committee voted unanimously Thursday to approve a bill that would allow school districts, cities and counties to operate vote centers instead of smaller polling places.

Vote centers keep a digital database of registered voters, called electronic poll books. Upon arrival, voters present their drivers' licenses and receive a paper ballot. People would no longer be limited to the specific polling places near their homes.

Every electronic poll book is connected to all other books in someone votes, he or she can't cast another ballot.

Supporters of the bill say it would facilitate voting throughout the day because people could go to a nearby voting center, regardless of where they live. Such centers use fewer poll workers and allow jurisdictions to save on rent by running fewer centers.

The bill's main sponsor, Sen. Todd Schlekeway, R-Sioux Falls, called this method an "exciting way" to conduct future elections.

In 2010, the South Dakota Legislature passed a bill that allowed a pilot project for the Sioux Falls school district to use vote centers during their school board election last spring. Schelekeway said the district deemed the concept a success after reviewing voter responses and cost

Dakota counties have expressed

Other parts of the U.S. that have already incorporated similar systems include Dallas County in Texas, Teppecanoe County, Ill., Fargo, N.D., and Larimar County, Colo.
