Hearing On Health Care Reform Wednesday

PIERRE — State legislators want to hear from South Dakotans on the need for health care reform. Sen. Jean Hunhoff and Rep. Scott Munsterman, chairs of the Senate and House health committees, will hold a joint hearing beginning at 10 a.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 20) in the state capital. The main focus of the hearing will be on the question of whether or not South Dakota state government should expand Medicaid as allowed through the Affordable Care Act. If the expansion is accomplished, it could provide health care insurance through Medicaid for up to 48,000 South Dakotans who are currently uninsured. The committee chairs said they especially hope to hear from health care providers, small business owners, workers and others who are affected. The hearing will be the third public meeting on the subject of Medicaid expansion. Gov. Dugaard's staff held an informational meeting on the second day of session, and earlier this month the Council for State Governments sent an expert to discuss the issue with legislators. No action will be taken at Wednesday's hearing. A motion to expand Medicaid will likely occur before the Appropriations Committee during final amendments to the general spending bill in the last week of the legislative session. A bipartisan group of 19 lawmakers is working to collect data and promote discussion on the expansion.

ON THIS DATE

75 YEARS AGO
Friday, February 18, 1938
• The Upper Missouri Valley Association, in a meeting at Huron yesterday, passed a resolution urging making the Missouri river navigable to Chamberlain. Everybody in South Dakota should favor such a step. By means of barge lines, South Dakota would have cheap transportation for its products from the very heart of the state should the Big Muddy be made navigable to Chamberlain.
• Considering weather conditions there was a good crowd out for the first night of the two-day carnival being staged in G.A.R. hall by Roy Anderson Post, American Legion, and its Auxiliary. Tonight the carnival will be continued with the same features and a floor show for the entertainment of the public.

50 YEARS AGO
Monday, February 18, 1963
• The Yankton squadron of the Civil Air Patrol met at the local airport Feb. 14. A special feature of the evening, which proved intensely interesting to the group, was the showing of slides by Dean Shuff, who is a sky diver. His pictures were taken recently when he belonged to a sky diving club in Japan, where he was stationed with the armed forces.

• Linda Gross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gross and a Yankton high school junior, received a fourth place rating in the state soil conservation speaking contest held Saturday afternoon in the SDEA building at Pierre.

25 YEARS AGO
Thursday, February 18, 1988
• After 26 years of working behind the scenes to ensure that the Yankton Daily Press & Dakotan hits the streets on time, Mike Goldhorn, production manager, is resigning due to health reasons.
• Mount Marty College senior basketball player Renate Sluys was honored last week by the Yankton Quarterback Club for her accomplishments during her career with the Lady Lancers. The Noordwyck, Holland native established South Dakota career scoring and assists records as well as four other state collegiate records and six school records.

by about 80 of the 105 lawmakers, would increase state aid by $1 a student, but it would be amended to provide more if estimates at the end of the legislative session indicate the state can afford it. The House Appropriations Committee has only a few House bills left to consider on Tuesday.

MEDICAID EXPANSION

The Senate and House committees on Health and Human Services will hold a joint hearing Wednesday on the possibility of expanding Medicaid to cover more low-income people as part of the national health care overhaul. A group of lawmakers, including leaders from both parties, recommended that the hearing be held so they can learn more about the advantages and drawbacks of expanding Medicaid, the state-federal program that pays the medical expenses of poor people. The state's Medicaid program covers about 116,000 children, adults and disabled people. An expansion would add an estimated 48,000 people to the program's rolls, mostly adults without children. Gov. Dennis Dugaard wants the state to delay a decision because he is uncertain the federal government can keep its promise to pick up most of the cost of the expansion. Some lawmakers argue the state should expand coverage to get more people insured.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES

Lawmakers continue to work on plans to provide economic incentives to encourage construction of large-scale wind power, agricultural processing and industrial projects. South Dakota now has no overall economic incentive program because a tax refund program has expired and a new program intended as a replacement was rejected by voters in the November election. The Legislature has kept some bills alive with the intent of amending them when agreement is reached on an incentive program. For example, SB182, — sponsored by legislative leaders and on the Senate calendar for Tuesday — says only: "The Legislature shall pursue opportunities to enhance economic development for the state." Meanwhile, the Senate will vote this week on a bill that would provide financial incentives to encourage just the construction of wind power projects in the state.

SMOKE-OUT

If a committee rejects a bill, the sponsor sometimes tries to get the full House or Senate to debate the measure anyway by using a move called a smoke-out. If one-third of the chamber's members agree, the committee must deliver the bill to the floor the next legislative day. If the committee delivers it without recommending that it pass, a majority vote is required to hold a full debate on the measure. Smoke-out maneuvers rarely work.

was at its largest before it became incorporated. Today, there are about 130 residents. "I have always lived in a small town, grew up in a small town but have lived here ever since my husband and I were married," said Becker, who was involved in the celebration 25 years ago. "I probably won't leave until I have to; I just love the small town atmosphere." Becker added even though there aren't as many businesses here as years ago, the businesses that have survived have grown as irreplaceable gears in the rural life of northeast Nebraska. Eickhoff is excited to be part of the centennial committee and listed a full event schedule made possible by many residents who are picking up the slack and working hard. A centennial newsletter has been included in the residents' monthly water bill and a trivia questions has been included each month to create interest in the event. A 5K run will start the day followed by softball and baseball competitions. A parade will start at 11 a.m. and the Northeast Nebraska Tractor Association will participate and offer a display after for visitors to enjoy. A quilt and historical display will be held in the Village Hall which is the original dance hall well-known for a roaring good time on Sunday evenings at the turn of the century. Food vendors will offer eating opportunities including the St. John's Ladies Guild, Hartington FFA, T&R Butcher Block and Ron Eskens BBQ. Other participant events include a pedal pull, horseshoes, a bouncy house and a beer garden hosted by the Fordyce Rural Fire District. There will also be local bazaar-type games for children like a fish pond and ring toss. Music in the afternoon will be provided by The Bumblebees in the St. John's Parish Center and an evening street dance from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. with the Gotcha Cover'd will end the day. A Facebook page for the centennial has been setup and the committee invites everyone to be a friend at: www.facebook.com/FordyceNebraska2013Centennial or for more information email them at fordycecentennial@yahoo.com.
