Owner Of Ring Found In River Located

From P&D Staff Reports

The owner of the ring found below Gavins Point Dam this week has been found.

The Press & Dakotan reported Thursday that a diver had found a Yankton High School Class of 1969 ring moments before it would have been sucked up along with other debris he had been tasked with clearing from the apron of the dam.

The diver, Al Hotzel, determined from the initials on the ring that it belongs to Gloria Jean Watt.

He told the Press & Dakotan Thursday evening that he had been contacted by a family member of Watt, and arrangements were being made to return it to her.

ON THIS DATE

75 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, February 22, 1938 It was an exciting late afternoon and evening yesterday when about 3:30 o'clock members of Battery "E" 147th Field Artillery, received orders to report to the armory and get ready to leave at 7:30 p.m. for Sioux Falls

A raid was made last night by Yankton police on several business houses in the city in which they picked up and confiscated seven slot machines of a non-vending, non-paying type which have found their way into the city following the recent prohibition and removal of machines that were supposed to vend confections and paid tokens which in turn could be played back into the machine.

50 YEARS AGO

Friday, February 22, 1963 The controversial beer bill to raise the legal age for purchase of 3.2 ber from 18 to 21 years of age was amended in the senate liquor control committee Thursday to raise the age from 18 to 19 and sent out to the floor with a "do pass" recommendation. Freedom Foundation Thursday night honored 863 individuals, organizations, businesses and schools, including 11 in South Dakota, for "bringing about a better understanding of the American way of life" in 1962. Yankton senior high school received an honor medal for editorial in Woksape.

25 YEARS AGO

Monday, February 22,1988 The local advisory committee overseeing Yankton's participation in the South Dakota Main Street project voted this morning to adopt a logo and project title of "Downtown Yankton." and to identify it as a Main Street project.

 Standing an estimated five stories from the top to the tip of the turbine deep in the recesses of the Missouri River, the hydroelectric generator can create up to 35 megawatts of power. Today, it stands still. Since January, workmen have dismantled one of the three Gavins Point Dam generators for needed repair work both above and underground.

Due to an early deadline caused by inclement weather, Thursday's lottery drawings were not available at press time.

Phone-Using Drivers More Likely To Speed, Drive Drowsy

SIOUX FALLS — Motorists who use cell phones while driving are more likely to engage in additional dangerous behaviors such as speeding, driving drowsy, driving without a seatbelt and sending texts or emails, according to a survey conducted by the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety. In addition, more than two-thirds (69 percent) of licensed drivers reported talking on a cell phone while driving within the last month despite the fact that nearly nine-in-ten respondents (89 percent) believe other drivers using cell phones are a threat to their personal

"Ninety percent of respondents believe that distracted driving is a somewhat or much bigger problem today than it was three years ago, yet they themselves continue to engage in the same activities," said Peter Kissinger, President and CEO of the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety. "More work clearly is needed to educate motorists on the risks associated with using a cell phone while driving, especially given that most Americans believe this problem is becoming

Motorists who fairly often or regularly used their cell phones over the last month also reported that they engaged in additional risky behaviors. The research shows:

- 65 percent also reported
- 44 percent also reported driving while drowsy
 - 53 percent also reported

sending a text or email • 29 percent also drove without a seatbelt

Conversely, drivers who reported never using a cell phone were much less likely to report additional risky behaviors:

- 31 percent reported speeding
- 14 percent reported driving
- 3 percent reported sending
- a text or email • 16 percent drove without a seatbelt Despite the near-universal disapproval of texting and emailing while driving (95 percent), more than one-in-four licensed drivers (27 percent) reported sending a text or email at least once in the past 30 days, and more than onethird (35 percent) said they read a text or email while driving. Young drivers age 16-24 were even more likely with more than half (61 percent) reporting having read a text or email while driving in the past month, while more than one-in-four (26 percent) reported checking or updating social media while driving. "What concerns AAA South Dakota is that this pattern of risky behavior goes beyond cell phone use," said Marilyn Buskohl, spokeswoman for AAA South Dakota. "These same cell phone-using drivers clearly understand the risk of distraction, driving behaviors.' Driver use of cell phones impairs reaction times and roughly quadruples crash risk. Additionally, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that more than 3,000 people are killed and nearly half a million are injured each year in crashes involving distraction. This is likely an underestimate given the challenges associated with determining the role of distraction in crashes.

AAA South Dakota strongly supports a legislative campaign to advocate for a text messaging ban in South Dakota. A bill outlawing texting behind the wheel have been filed for the upcoming legislative session. To date, 39 states and the District of Columbia have adopted this key traffic safety measure. The distraction data were collected as part of the AAA Foundation's 2012 Traffic Safety Culture Index, a nationally representative, probability-based survey of 3.896 U.S. residents ages 16 and older. The sample is representative of all U.S. households reachable by telephone or by regular mail. The questionnaire was made available in English and Spanish, and respondents were able to complete it in the language of their choice.
