Woman Dies In Crash With Driver From Yankton

BONESTEEL — A Fairfax woman died Friday in a two-vehicle crash on U.S. Highway 18 near Bonesteel. Elizabeth Ann Koenig, 52, was westbound, driving a 2002 Chrysler Concord when her vehicle was struck by an eastbound 2002 Peterbilt semi-truck and trailer driven by Richard Daniel Trattles, 61, of Yankton. Koenig was traveling behind a South Dakota Department of Transportation snowplow. After Trattles met the plow, his vehicle crossed into the westbound lane and struck Koenig's vehicle. Koenig died at the scene. Trattles was not injured. Both drivers were wearing seatbelts. No further information is immediately available. The South Dakota Highway Patrol is investigating. The Gregory County Sheriff's Office and Bonesteel Fire Department assisted.

YMS Sets Student-Parent-Teacher Conferences

Yankton Middle School will be holding Student/Parent/Teacher conferences on Monday, March 11, and Tuesday, March 12, from 4-8 p.m. The format will be student-led conferences for this year's second conference. The conferences will be 15 minutes with the SRB teachers attending as facilitators. Students will receive a conference notice on Wednesday, Feb. 27, which needs to be signed by parent/guardian and returned to school. If a conflict exists, call 665-2419 to reschedule. Parents of the current sixth- and seventh-graders will be filling out registration forms for the 2013-2014 school year during conference time.

VLP Annual Poetry Festival Set For Thursday

VERMILLION — The Vermillion Literary Project (VLP) will hold its annual Poetry Festival on Thursday, Feb. 28, in Old Main and the MUC Pit Lounge, on University of South Dakota USD campus in Vermillion. This year's day-long festival features visiting poets Stacey Waite and Miles Waggener, as well as a reading by USD grad student poets Teniesha Kessler-Emanuel, Sara Henning and David Levine. The festival includes a morning poetry writing workshop with Waggener, a noon reading by our grad students, an afternoon writing workshop with Waite, an afternoon reading by Waite and Waggener, and an evening reading and poetry slam (competitive poetry performance) hosted by Waite. There is a registration fee for the writing workshops, and space is limited. No previous writing experience is needed to participate in the workshops. All sessions are open to the public, and poetry slam participation is open to anyone; slam poets should bring three original poems. The readings and slam are free. For more information about the festival, call the USD English Department at 605-677-5229 or visit the VLP website: <http://sites.usd.edu/projlit/vlp-poetry-festival>

• The city (Lake Andes) water supply which went berserk last summer, running red with rust and becoming so hard it required solvents, has as suddenly returned to its clear and pleasantly soft consistency. The town has a soft water and a hard water well which are usually pumped simultaneously with the soft water, overcoming the hardness of the second well.
• Search for two men who failed in an attempt to raid the State Bank of Chandler, Minn., yesterday led across the line into South Dakota last night when Sheriff Joseph Hines said a car borrowed from a garage here (Pipstone) corresponds with the description of that used by the bandits. Authorities asked officers of southeastern South Dakota to aid in the search for the two men.

THANKS YOU!

Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
if so, we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
As any friend could say;
Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much whatever the part.

Cuts

political process itself as the culprit. If Congress does not step in, a top-to-bottom series of cuts will be spread across domestic and defense agencies in a way that would fundamentally change how government serves its people. Obama senior adviser Dan Pfeiffer told reporters that the GOP is "so focused on not giving the president another win" that they will cost thousands of jobs. To back up their point, the White House released state-by-state tallies for how many dollars and jobs the budget cuts would mean to each state. "The Republicans are making a policy choice that these cuts are better than eliminating loopholes," Pfeiffer said. And, yes, those cuts will hurt. The cuts would slash from domestic and defense spending alike, leading to furloughs of hundreds of thousands of government workers and contractors. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta has said the cuts would harm the readiness of U.S. fighting forces. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood said travelers could see delayed flights. Education Secretary Arne Duncan said 70,000 fewer children from low-income families would have access to Head Start programs. And furloughed meat inspectors could leave plants idled. In Virginia, for instance, 90,000 Defense Department civilian employees could be furloughed, including nurses at Army hospitals, said Sen. Tim Kaine, D-Va. He also said ship-repair contractors could lay off 300 of their 450 employees. "There is no reason that this has to happen. We just need to find a balanced approach," Kaine said. White House officials also pointed to Ohio as another state that would be hit hard: $25.1 million in education spending and another $22 million for students with disabilities. Some 2,500 children from low-income families would also be removed from Head Start programs. Officials also said their analysis showed Kentucky would lose $93,000 in federal funding for a domestic abuse program, meaning 400 fewer victims being

Crandall

Crandall's unique style of announcing started before his Yankton days, and he said the YHS staff and administrators were supportive of that method. "I said to one of the teachers, 'This is the way I want to do this here,' and she said, 'Why not,'" Crandall said. "So that's the way I've been doing it ever since." And since those early games, he has become a kind of local celebrity for the way he keeps things upbeat prior to tip-off and during breaks to read announcements. Sawatzke, who has two sons, Lane and Reid, playing basketball for the Bucks, said she has compared Crandall's style to those at other schools. "We go to all the other ESD schools and ones in Sioux Falls, and there are a couple that are good like that, but for the most part, nobody's like Terry," she said. "It's fun being a mom in the stands, because you get to hear these served in Senator Minority Leader Mitch McConnell's home state. Georgia, meanwhile, would face a $286,000 budget cut to its children's health programs, meaning almost 4,200 fewer children would receive vaccinations against measles and whooping cough. White House officials said Nevada would face military furloughs totaling $12.1 million in reduced pay, a $424,000 cut to pay for meals for seniors and an almost $2 million reduction for clean air and water programs. The White House was ready with state-by-state reports dealers to compromise or face unhappy constituents. The White House compiled the numbers from federal agencies and its own budget office. The numbers are based only on the $85 billion in cuts for this fiscal year, from March to September, that are set to take effect Friday. As to whether states could move money around to cover shortfalls, the White House said that depends on state budget structures and the specific programs. The White House did not more of what he says." Of course Crandall says his style has evolved over time, with more experience, and as he joked, with age. "I'm sure in some ways, it's more mature than it used to be," he said. "When I go to other games, I don't get judgmental because I know what it's like." Asked if there were any certain games that stand out to him in his tenure, Crandall pointed to a Yankton-Brookings boys' game in 2007. On that night, the Bucks hit a game-winning three-pointer at the buzzer, 28-25, in a classic low-scoring Eastern South Dakota Conference showdown. "That was the first time we had the new lights on the backboard," Crandall said. "Someone from Brookings joked that they couldn't be upset (by claiming) the Daktronics equipment was manufactured in Yankton. "I've seen a few games like that, where you think, 'I'm glad I was there to see that.'" As time has passed and the success for the Bucks and Gazelles has fluctuated, Crandall said he takes most enjoyment out of walking out of the Summit Center following a victory. "I really enjoy coming away from games when the Bucks or Gazelles win," he said. "Not just for me, but for the team and the whole town."

have a list of which states or programs might have flexibility. Some governors said the impasse was just the latest crisis in Washington that is keeping businesses from hiring and undermining the ability of state leaders to develop their own spending plans. "It's senseless and it doesn't need to happen," said Gov. Martin O'Malley, D-Md., during the annual meeting of the National Governors Association this week-end. "And it's a damn shame, because we've actually had the fastest rate of jobs recovery of any state in our region. And this really threatens to hurt a lot of families in our state and kind of flat line our job growth for the next several months," O'Malley said. The budget cuts were all but certain to come up when Obama dines with the governors Sunday evening at the White House. But time is running out and hope is waning. Suggestions intended to instill a spirit of compromise included bringing all sides to the bargaining table, where they could act like "adults," a presidential summit at Camp David and even a field trip to watch "Lincoln." Yet none of those options was on the books. Part of that devotion was felt during his brief ceremony last Tuesday. Shortly after Crandall waved to the crowd, he turned to the Yankton students and blew them a kiss. In kind, they followed with a chant of his name. "He has such a good relationship with the students, you can just tell," Sawatzke said. "I'm glad they did that (the chant), even if he was a little embarrassed. He needs to know how much people like him and what he does." You can follow Jeremy Hoeck on Twitter at twitter.com/jhoeck
