

OBITUARIES

Daryl Bernard

Daryl Clarence Bernard died at age 89 on Sunday, February 10th with his daughters, Janis Skott and Nancy Nissen, and the caring staff at Sister James Care Center by his side.

Mass of Christian Burial will be 10:30 a.m. Saturday, March 2, 2013 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, Yankton, with Rev. Mark Lichter officiating. He will be laid to rest at Sacred Heart Cemetery next to his adored Marvis following the service with Military Graveside Rites by the Ernest-Bowyer VFW Post #791 Honor Guard and the SDARNG Honor Guard.

Visitations will begin at 4 p.m., Friday March 1, 2013 at the Opsahl-Kostel Funeral Home & Crematory, Yankton, with a Scripture service at 7:30 p.m. Visitations will resume one hour prior to the service at the church.

Daryl Clarence was born on his family farm, September 22, 1923 in Jefferson, SD to Clarence and Bernadette Bernard. He was their first born but was soon followed by Marcus, Bernie Rae, and Buddy Jr. He attended St. Peter's Parochial School and graduated from Jefferson High School in 1941 where he was active in drama, sports, and staying on top of his academics (when he wasn't working on the farm or thinking about baseball).

Bernard

He attended Yankton College from 1942-43 until he entered the Navy V-12 program at Minot State Teachers College in Minot, North Dakota. He was stationed at Asbury Park Naval Institute in New Jersey and then was off to New York's Columbia and Cornell Universities for further training. In 1945, he was assigned to the USS Gordon AF-43 as an engineering officer in the South Pacific. He served until 1946 when he returned to Yankton College.

It was there that he met and courted the love of his life, Marvis Wilcox. Although the two of them grew up on farms just one mile apart in rural Jefferson, Yankton College brought them together.

While attending school full-time, Daryl paid for his college education on the GI bill and by working part-time at the Diamond Shoe Store. Daryl had a monumental year in 1948, he graduated from Yankton College with a BA in mathematics and a minor in science. He married Marvis Wilcox, whisking her away to Rapid City, SD where they both became teachers.

They enjoyed their time in the Black Hills but yearned for their family and friends back in Yankton, they moved back in 1949 where Yankton became their permanent home. Daryl did a short stint back at the Diamond Shoe Store and then was hired by Sears and Roebuck where he worked in the Sales Department for 40 years, culminating as the Department Head of Sales.

Daryl was extremely active in the Yankton community. He was an avid hunter and a proud member of Sacred Heart Parish (50 years), the Yankton Baseball Association and all its youth programs, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Knights of Columbus, Elks 994, and the Golden Kiwanis.

He won numerous life-time achievement awards including Seratoma Service to Mankind Award, Sporting Outfitters Heroes Award, and was an original inductee of the Yankton Baseball Hall of Fame. He was extremely proud to be named, with Marvis, Captain and Belle of Riverboat Days 1992. Several years ago, Daryl was chosen to participate in the final "Honor Flight" to Washington, DC with fellow World War II veterans. He spoke of that trip and fellow veterans with great honor and pride.

You would often see Daryl walking around Fantle Memorial Park (with or without a dog) to get his daily exercise, lecturing at Sacred Heart Church, filling the coffee pots at the Knights of Columbus breakfast, having coffee after mass at Hy-Vee, volunteering with TEAM at Avera Sacred Heart Hospital or in his acre garden rototilling or digging up something for the dinner table for his family and friends.

Daryl's passion was baseball at every level, from the Yankton Teeners to the annual family trips to the Kansas City Royals and his beloved St. Louis Cardinals stadiums. Daryl could not get enough of baseball. It is fitting to know that Daryl requested that every-one attending his funeral sing "Take me out to the ballgame" as his final departure song.

Daryl is survived by his brother, Marcus and his wife Margaret; five children: Janis Skott and her husband, Randy, Nancy Nissen, Jim Bernard and wife, Chris, Susan Bernard and Beth Bernard; 13 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren.

Two memorial funds have been set up in Daryl Bernard's honor at Family Radio Rosary Program, 509 Capitol, Yankton, SD 57078 and Avera Sacred Heart Foundation, 1000 West 4th Street, Suite #14, Yankton, SD 57078.

Workshop

Goeller and Hawbaker hold sterling reputations in their fields, and workshops were packed at both Mead, Neb., and Blair, Neb., Soll said.

"Dave Goeller is a transition specialist, and Joe Hawbaker is a legend in estate planning, especially farm and ranch estate planning," she said.

Tax issues have emerged as huge areas of interest at the workshops, Soll said.

"Changes happen daily or weekly within the (tax) system," she said. "You need to stay current, particularly what comes from the federal government."

Health care costs, particularly long-term care, can break many families, said Wyatt Fraas with the Center for Rural Affairs in Hartington.

"Somebody in the family is likely to have care outside the home," he said. "For some, it's months. For others, it's several years. You have to be prepared for it."

Health care costs can adversely impact a farm or ranch operation, Fraas said.

"If you don't have insurance, then you need to plan for where the money will come from (for care)," he said. "Many families, in the past, planned to use the family assets to pay for this. If you need long-term care, this could mean selling off the whole farm or parts of the farm, and it may not cover all of the needs. It can cripple farms and businesses if enough of the operation is sold."

The result can affect future generations, Fraas said.

"If assets are sold, it reduces the size of the estate for all of the heirs," he said. "They care about their relatives and the quality of care they receive. But there is also concern about how you will pay for it."

Thursday's workshop will allow time for short sessions with Goeller and Hawbaker to discuss specific questions, Fraas said.

The graying of Nebraska's farmers and ranchers has created an urgency about transferring farms to the next generation.

According to the National Census of Agriculture, Nebraska had 13,436 operators under the age of 35 in 1982. The figure shrunk to 3,353 by 2007. At the other end of the age spectrum, the number of Nebraska operators age 65 and older soared from 8,777 in 1982 to 13,062 a quarter-century later. Nebraska has only 25 percent as many operators under 35 years of age as it did in 1982. During the same 25-year period, those Nebraska farm and ranch operators 65 and over have increased 149 percent.

Because of those figures, Fraas has seen a surge in attendance at workshops such as the upcoming one in Hartington.

"Five years ago, Joe and Dave would do these (workshops), and they struggled to get very many to attend. The senior generation typically didn't want to make any plans. They didn't want to think about it," he said.

"But that has changed a great deal. Their adult children see it's a mess if you don't deal with it, so they are bringing their elderly parents to these workshops. They are learning about the issues in order to make decisions." Soll has also seen a much greater openness in talking about estate issues.

"We started doing this (program) seven years ago, and some of these workshops were a real hush-hush deal," she said. "I really think, from the last generation to this generation, there has been much better, open communication and they plan together."

The increased comfort about the topic can be seen at workshops, Soll said. "The interaction has been amazing. People always have good questions and can answer other people's questions," she said. "So many people say there's so much good information in such a 'short amount of time' — and it's six hours!"

For producers, much remains at stake when it comes to estate planning, Soll said.

"It's about how the family puts together a fair plan for those who stay on the farm and for the off-farm heirs," she said. "You are working to protect yourself and not lose your estate during the transition process."

The Hartington workshop is sponsored by the Nebraska Network for Beginning Farmers and Ranchers; Legal Aid of Nebraska; Nebraska Department of Agriculture Farm Mediation; U.S. Department of Agriculture Risk Management Agency and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Extension.

Hagel

Republicans had opposed their onetime colleague, casting him as unqualified for the job, hostile toward Israel and soft on Iran. The objections remained strong well after the vote.

"I continue to have serious questions about whether Chuck Hagel is up to the job of being our secretary of defense," Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., said in a statement. "I hope, for the sake of our own national security, he exceeds expectations."

Hagel joins Obama's retooled second-term, national security team of Secretary of State John Kerry and CIA Director-designate John Brennan at a time of uncertainty for a military emerging from two wars and fighting worldwide terrorism with smaller, deficit-driven budgets.

Among his daunting challenges are deciding on troop levels in Afghanistan as the United States winds down its combat presence and dealing with $46 billion in budget cuts set to kick in on Friday. He also will have to work with lawmakers who spent weeks vilifying him.

Republicans insisted that Hagel was battered and bloodied after their repeated attacks during the protracted political fight.

"He will take office with the weakest support of any defense secretary in modern history, which will make him less effective on his job," said Sen. John Cornyn of Texas, the Senate GOP's No. 2 Republican.

Not so, said Democratic Sen. Jack Reed, who pointed out that Hagel now has the title and the fight is history.

"All have to work together for the interest of the country," said Reed, D-R.I.

The vote ended one of the most bitter fights over a Cabinet choice and former senator since 1989 when the Democratic-led Senate defeated newly elected President George H.W. Bush's nomination of Republican John Tower to be defense secretary.

In the course of the rancorous, seven-week nomination fight, Republicans, led by freshman Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas and Sen. Jim Inhofe of Oklahoma, insinuated that Hagel has a cozy relationship with Iran and received payments for speeches from extreme or radical groups. Those comments drew a rebuke from Democrats and some Republicans.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, dismissed the "unfair innuendoes" against Hagel and called him an "outstanding American patriot" whose background as an enlisted soldier would send a positive message to the nation's servicemen and women.

Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., questioned how the confirmation process devolved into a character assassination in which Hagel was accused of "having secret ties with our enemies."

"I sincerely hope that the practice of challenging nominations with innuendo and inference, rather than facts and figures, was an aberration and not a roadmap," she said in a statement after the vote.

THANK YOU
Thank you for the many beautiful cards, gifts, flowers, and visits for my 96th birthday. I'm still celebrating. I've had a great time. Bless all of you. If you haven't gotten to 96 I pray you'll have it as good as I.
Bye for this time, Helen Thompson
