prevention. It also focuses on the "six pillars of character" trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring and good citizenship.

'We seek to reach them spiritually, socially, mentally, physically and emotionally, Chris said.

He added that simply teaching prevention techniques is not enough to be successful, as it is crucial to reach the "whole being of a

"The spiritual component is very important because it shapes how a human being behaves," Chris said.

The approach has been a productive one for the Maphosas, as recent test results of 107 children that went through the ministry showed them all to be HIV negative.

"There's a lot of impact," Chris said. "Children I meet are saying, 'Because of Today for Tomorrow, I live a life that helped me not be infected by

Thanks to the success of Today for Tomorrow, the global missionary organization Serving In Mission has commissioned the Maphosas to spread their ministry to other countries in Africa. Currently, Today for Tomorrow is operating in Zimbabwe, Lesotho, South Africa and Botswana. Officials hope to add the countries of Angola, Namibia, Madagascar, Mozambique, Zambia, Swaziland, Malawi and Mauritius.

To raise funding and awareness for the expansion of their program, the Maphosas recently embarked on an international tour. They are seeking financial partners and donors to cover operating expenses, such as lesson books, transportation and training materi-

"As missionaries, we depend on the support of people who think this is a good cause," Chris said.

The Maphosas arrived in the United States on Feb. 1, first visiting cities in Texas and Montana before coming to Yankton. This is their last planned stop in the U.S. before leaving for Canada.

While in Yankton, the missionaries have met with area pastors and also have preached and shared stories of their ministry at Kingsway Christian Church.

"I've been very impressed by their passion for the ministry, and I know all the people in the church have been moved by it," said Kingsway Christian Church member Cindy Mason, whose family is hosting the Maphosas. "It's been a very eye-opening experience.'

Chris stressed that no donation is too small to help.

"Every little bit is much to us," he said.

admissions at the college. "As an institution, we are very sensitive to the rising costs of higher education. The president of the United States is demanding that institutions be more accountable for not just raising tuition and fees each year but making sure we're putting a value and marketability to everything we do. We know that we've got a value and good outcome stories to share.

She said families are very sensitive to the debt load incurred by earning a degree in higher education. The recruitment and financial aid staff are sitting down with families daily," Tacke stated. "They are looking at the bottom line. They are looking at total debt. They want information that backs up that the student will not only get a value but also get a job. According to Mount Marty, approximately 99 percent of students attending the school require financial support.

Graduates of the institution report a 96 percent employment rate in degree-relevant programs, as well as nearly 100 percent acceptance into graduate and professional programs.

In comparison to the 10 other schools in the Great Plains Athletic Conference (GPAC), Mount Marty ranks as the second most affordable based on tuition and fees.

We look at our costs and what we deliver as a product and, as the market goes in this part of the country, we feel like we deliver a very affordable education and an excellent one," Benoit stated. Had the college board decided to increase tuition, he said he doubted it would have affected enrollment. Just more than 1,200 students are enrolled between the college's locations in Yankton, Sioux Falls and Watertown.

"There is almost an expectation that tuition will increase." Benoit stated. "Discussions at the national level have been that we have a responsibility as providers of higher education to examine our cost structure. In doing that, we evaluate if we are charging what we need to be charging. We feel that we are right now.

'Access and affordability is a big factor in many students' minds, and I think our commitment to those concerns speaks to our values as an institution," he continued. "I think this is a good decision for all the right reasons."
