Important Two Weeks Coming Up For Lancer Women

ular season title, win the tournament (or finish second to the regular season champ) or get an at-large berth. At-large berths in the NAIA are based solely on national ranking, making the organization the one place in the world where the polls actually matter.

MMC did not get any votes last week, but the chance to impress votes is ahead of it. Top-ranked and unbeaten Morningside comes to town on Wednesday, and MMC celebrates Homecoming against No. 17 Hastings on Saturday. On Feb. 11, 22nd-ranked Briar Cliff comes to town.

If the Lancers came pick up some key home victories in the next 10 days, they will give themselves some leverage in the polls and an opportunity to make it to nationals without having to win the GPAC Tournament

Despite the league's gaudy non-league record (74-23 outside of league play), the NAIA's strongest women's basketball league will probably receive four, possibly five, national tournament berths. If the Lancers want to be among them, winning a couple of their next three games would be a step in the right direction

And it is possible: MMC has wins over top-five opponents in each of the past three seasons.

If a basketball season can be equated to a semester, it's about to become finals week for the Mount

Not because there are only one or two games left - or because it's the post-season - but be-

Mount Marty (16-8, 7-8 GPAC) sits in seventh position in the GPAC. With five games left to play for

At the same time, they are a game behind sixth place Doane, and 2 1/2 back of the final two spots

Since there are three ways to make the NAIA Division II Tournament from the GPAC - win the req-

cause the Lancers need a last-minute push to impress the "teacher," i.e., the pollsters, before the Great
