each other better."

One special character that Schumacher wants audiences to look out for is the old man played by Quinn Fargo.

"He was a very small, minor character but Quinn took it to the next level, Schumacher said. "He has just been doing so well with the play and coming up with ideas that are just off the wall. So I told him to do it in the play. He has made this character a much larger part than it was originally."

Kaitlyn Paulson, who plays Trudy the maid, said that the character of the old man is her favorite part.

"He is really funny," Paulson said. "I think that the audience will like him and all the other funny parts in the play.

Schumacher said he has tried to make all of the smaller parts much bigger for their production.

"We have given them some entrance music and they are also doing a lot more movement than originally," he said. "We want people to see these characters a little bit longer and make them more memorable. We want their families to see them because this really is a big time commitment.'

The cast has been meeting four days a week since practices began.

"All these kids have a lot of other activities on top of this," he said. "All the roles are special. We want these kids to have fun and come back to audition for many plays to come.

Schumacher said that he hopes good audiences turn out for the performances.

"These kids are going to feed off the crowd," he said. "I hope people come out to see it. It's a fun show and everyone will have a good time. At the very least, you are going to laugh. You are going to laugh a lot. It's just funny."

Conan O'Brien Takes His Show To Cuba

NEW YORK (AP) — On Wednesday's show, Conan O'Brien will be found in a familiar place: behind a desk.

Or, rather, what he describes as a borrowed cafe table. In Havana, Cuba.

But for most of the hour (11 p.m. EST on TBS), "Conan" will find its host footloose and fancy-free, airing a talk show from this nearby but isolated island country for apparently the first time since Jack Paar took his own late-night show to Cuba in 1959.

Conan in Cuba," still being edited, was unavailable for preview. But in a chat with reporters recently, O'Brien listed a few highlights: He tries to learn to play authentic Cuban music and how to rumba. He visits a cigar factory where 400 virtuosos make cigars he calls "works of art." (He'll try to make one, too.)

He tries to supplement his 8th-grade Spanish vocabulary with instruction in Spanish slang.

And he takes a meal at an out-of-the-way paladar (a familyrun restaurant in a Cuban home), where he revels in having made a dining discovery no other Americans would likely stumble on — then spies a photo on the wall signed by comedian Rob Schneider.

Most important to his mission, O'Brien mingles with Havana locals and takes in local sights. For an hour, his is a talk show unmoored.

The venture — springing "Conan" from its Los Angeles home base — began when President Barack Obama in December surprised the world by re-establishing relations with Cuba a half-century after communist rule led to estrangement from the U.S., just 90 miles away.
