75 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, February 28, 1940
 • By an unofficial vote of 1,423 to 398 — a little better than 3.5 to 1 — the people of Yankton yesterday in a special election approved the renewal of the election franchise of the Northwestern Public Service Co. for twenty years.
 • "One more hunt," says the Yankton County chapter of the Izak Walton League. This another "last hunt" of the season - will be held next Sunday, and it was decided on to meet the requests of farmers of Mayfield selection that the club assist in reducing the jackrabbit population of their section.

25 YEARS AGO

 • Yankton County may buy a portion of the Human Services Center land purchased earlier this month by the city and use it for a fairground complex. Members of the 4-H Leaders Association addressed the commission Tuesday regarding purchase of the land.
 • The Yankton Bucks ran into the "toughest defense we've faced all year," according to YHS coach Doug Pesicka. And it resulted in a 59-46 loss to Sioux Falls Lincoln Tuesday night in the YHS gym. The Bucks jumped off to a quick 8-0 lead early in the contest and held a 13-11 advantage at the end of the first quarter.

Yankton May See No April Election As Deadline Passes To Enter Races

From P&D Staff Reports

As the 5 p.m. deadline for returning petitions for the Yankton City Commission and the Yankton School Board passed Friday, five people had been certified to enter the races.

However, if no other petitions are received by certified mail next week, there will not be an election in either race in April.

City Finance Officer Al Viereck said three people have returned petitions for the City Commission incumbents Dave Carda (who is also the current mayor), Dave Knoff and newcomer

Nathan Johnson.

In the Yankton School Board race, Kathy Greenway and Mathew Pietz were the only candidates to file at deadline.

"People who took out a petition, can choose, rather than returning the completed forms to the administration building or city hall, to have them notarized and send them via certified mail no later than 5 p.m. Friday," said YSD business manager Jason Bietz. "I don't expect to have that happen. If we don't receive additional petitions, then there will not be a school board election and (the) incumbents ... will return to the board for another term."

Bietz noted that this could potentially be the second school board election in as many years that would not have an election.

In the city, three positions were open, but incumbent Pauline Akland chose not to seek reelection.

Viereck said while it's less likely now, there is still an outside chance a municipal election will be held.

"We would cancel our election and these three (would be) automatically ushered in, so to speak," Viereck said. "They would (be sworn in) at the second (City Commission) meeting in May."

He noted the last time a City Commission election was not held was in 2004.

Viereck added the lack of controversy within the city and the commission led to fewer petitions being filed.

"That doesn't mean everybody's 100 percent happy all the time," he said. "Usually, it takes controversial issues that drive somebody to say, 'I'm tired of this and I'm going to file for a petition.'"

Should an additional petition for either board be received next week, the resulting general election would be held April 14.

In Friday's Press & Dakotan story "CO Call Turns Out To Be False Alarm," it was reported a rural Volin family had become suspicious of a carbon monoxide leak after three baby chickens they'd purchased that day died in succession. This number was based on inaccurate information provided to the Press & Dakotan. The number should've been 63 chickens out of 100 that had been recently purchased. The cause remains under investigation.
