BY CHRISSY DREIMOT

ромника — South Dakota lawmakers appointed a three-member panel on Friday to put an end to lawsuits between oil companies competing with each other in attracting projects that generate electricity.

In a survey by The Associated Press, about 31 percent of those surveyed responding said they were undecided on the best way to cure or cut the country's problems. Another 17 percent said they were inclined to support conservative or Republican policies, while only 12 percent were opposed.

The panel was created in October to study the state's tax base and to determine if the state would have a fair chance of winning more revenue from the federal government. The state's revenue is estimated to be $12.5 billion, while $1 billion will be invested to the near 22 months to convert most of the Pamida stores into Shopko Hometown stores.

The companies say there will be no change to Shopko's stores, and that the merger is expected to close in mid-February.

The North Dakota Herald reports that the state reduce construction taxes for projects costing $10 million to $40 million, and a 55 percent tax refund to the state. The new law also allows developers of green energy projects to transfer an excise tax on a contractor's gross receipts for a type of project to other projects. It also levies a 2 percent excise tax on materials used in constructing wind farms.

North Dakota Gov. Jack Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- fice will continue to look into the potential for wind farms in the state. Dalrymple said Wednesday that his of- o