

Third Man Arrested In UK Olympic Surveillance Case

LONDON (AP) — A third person has been arrested by police investigating allegations that people acting for Premier League soccer club Tottenham spied on officials during the club's failed bid to take over London's Olympic Stadium after the Games.

Tottenham has been accused of ordering surveillance on the London Olympic executives who eventually chose the bid of rival London club West Ham to take over the stadium.

Since August, London police have been investigating allegations of wrongdoing in the bidding process that were made by West Ham and the Olympic Park Legacy Company, whose board members decide the future of venues on the site of the Games.

Two people were arrested in November in connection with the illegal procurement of information and now police say they detained a 57-year-old man in Cheshire on Wednesday "on suspicion of fraud offenses" before releasing him on bail until February.

He is Howard Hill, a former partner at accountancy firm PKF that a judge said last year "was engaged by Tottenham Hotspur to carry out an investigation that was in some way connected with the Olympic Stadium."

PKF was not available for comment late Friday, but there was no reference to Hill on its web site. The Daily Telegraph newspaper, which broke news of Hill's arrest on Friday night, cited a PKF statement as saying: "Howard Hill resigned from the firm on Dec 15 and we have not had any communication with him since."

West Ham's deal to take over the stadium collapsed in October and the $744 million venue has been left without any tenant after the Olympics, pending a new search.

Separate to the ongoing police investigation, West Ham is taking legal action in an attempt to discover details of the "wrongdoers responsible" for the alleged obtaining of phone records. A judge said at a hearing in November that the telephone records of West Ham vice chairman Karren Brady were "unlawfully obtained by subterfuge" during the bidding process.

The High Court heard that PKF, which denies being engaged in any unlawful activity, said it had copies of wrongfully obtained telephone records.

OPLC company chair Margaret Ford made the allegations about Tottenham in a London Assembly committee hearing in November.

Tottenham denies any allegations of spying or the illegal obtaining of information, previously stressing that it "did not instruct PKF to engage in any unlawful activity and PKF have confirmed that they did not."

Bucks

Bucks were able to tie the match at 12-12.

First, Mason Strahl recorded a 20-5 technical fall over Tyler Skogstad, and Casey Skillingstad followed with a 10-1 major decision over Michael Johnson.

"I was really proud of the way Casey stepped up the tempo in the third period," Hage said. "When you're talking major decisions, those are huge team points."

With the match tied at 12, the visiting Tigers turned to their top-ranked 138-pounder, Cain Glanzer, for a boost.

He didn't disappoint, recording a third-period pin over Matt Huber — putting Huron ahead for good, 18-12.

From there, the Tigers didn't slow down.

The showdown of the night came at 145 pounds, where Huron's Mackenzie Harvey upset second-ranked Logan Smith 11-9 in overtime.

Only the second loss of the season for the Yankton senior, a defending state champion, the setback also put the Bucks in a 12-12 hole.

Next came six consecutive victories for Huron, from Reagan Francom (152), fourth-ranked Hartman Katz (160), Austin Meyers (170), Tyler Kleinsasser (182), Dustin French (195) and top-ranked Matt Halter (220).

Yankton was able to end the night on a good note, as Royce Reiser got a pin at 285 pounds.

Though they have a week off to prepare for next Friday's home dual with Mitchell, the Bucks can benefit from that hiatus, Hage said.

"Hopefully we get some guys healthy and back to full strength," he said. "This time of the year, though, every team deals with stuff like that. We've got a grind in front of us; we can't make excuses."

sonal touch on it, and hopefully that helps those teams remember Yankton and the tournament they played here, win or lose."

The JV girls' tournament will not only be the oldest age group Yankton has hosted for a state hockey tournament, it will also be the first where the players are female. Bantam and PeeWee teams are coed, but the vast majority of the players are male.

"The girls' tournaments are a lot different than the boys," Baumeister noted. "At the boys' tournaments they want to get on the ice and they play to win, then they get off the ice. What I've seen in the girls' games is that there is a lot more social aspect to it."

"Prior to the games it's noisy and chatty outside the locker room and outside the glass. When they get on the ice they're all business. Then when they get off the ice, they're noisy and chatty again."

Besides the social aspects, Yankton wants to present a fun atmosphere for the girls coming to town.

"We're all here for one purpose, and that is to enjoy the last few games together," Freeman said. "We want to have good quality games and create an atmosphere of sportsmanship among all the teams."

Baumeister is hoping that the event can not only showcase Yankton, but give a boost to the team as well.

"It will be a fun way for those girls to end their season, and I think a really good way for us to keep our girls' program going in Yankton," she said.
