ON THIS DATE

75 YEARS AGO

Thursday, January 21, 1937

Yankton was digging out today from another snow blockade, yesterday's tieups being one of the most severe of the series which have visited this section since the first of the year. Snow plows and shoveling crews were busy early this morning in all parts of the county and city and gradually traffic is again being resumed. School work was in progress at all of the public schools in Yankton today although there were many absences.

Valiant dog teams defeated the Cascade mountains' deep snows to save Fred White, 25-year-old minister, from an appendicitis operation in the wilds and place him today in a hospital bed. White arrived at a hospital in Okanogan, Wash., last night for an appendectomy after a journey of more than 15 hours in 18-below-zero weather.

A new telemarketing business that will employ 27-35 people is planning to begin operations in Hartington in April. Hartington Telemarketing Incorporated, a subsidiary of Hartington Telephone Company, will start operations April 20, said Bill Dendinger, manager of the telephone company.

More than 600 students were absent from Yankton schools last week, a number that school officials say is higher than normal but no cause for concern. The primary cause apparently is a strain of influenza, but not the troublesome A/Taiwan strain.

USD Social Work Professor Selected For Fellowship

VERMILLION — Jarod Giger, Ph.D., assistant professor of social work at the University of South Dakota, has been selected for the National Rural Health Association's (NRHA) Rural Health Fellows (RHF) Program of 2012.

This year-long intensive program is designed to develop leaders who can articulate a clear and compelling vision for health care in rural America. Participation begins with Giger's attendance at the NRHA's Rural Health Policy Institute meeting, set for Jan. 29 in Washington.

"With emerging health care changes in rural communities, we need policy and practice leaders like Dr. Giger to help us make good decisions," said Michael Lawler, M.S.W., Ph.D., dean of the School of Health Sciences at the University of South Dakota.

Giger was chosen from a pool of applicants that included health care professionals from across the nation. Applicants were evaluated based upon their overall purpose for applying, educational background, capacity for becoming an active NRHA participant and understanding of rural health care issues.
